Employment opportunities look good for 1st quarter of 1988

Hiring plans of U.S. business firms for the first quarter of 1988 were virtually unaffected by last October’s drop in stock market prices, according to a new survey of hiring strength released by Manpower Inc., the worldwide temporary help service.

The survey, which includes responses from more than 13,000 U.S. business firms, predicts that hiring activity in the traditionally slow post-holiday period will be as strong as that seen in any comparable period of the current 60-month recovery and will reflect strength in all business sectors and geographic areas.

More than 21 percent of the business men surveyed say they plan to increase their workforce size in the first quarter of 1988. This compares to 19 percent planning to hire a year ago. At the same time, firms planning to decrease their workforce dropped from the 14 percent level a year ago to 13 percent this year.

According to Manpower Inc. President Mitchell St. Emron, the survey was conducted during the week following the October financial crisis, but responses we measured in mid-October to determine if established or plans were changed by market conditions. Fromm said 56 percent of the firms in second survey reconfirmed their original projections.

“It is quite clear,” said Fromm, “that the financial market decline had little or no effect on first quarter hiring plans. The labor market has a life and nature of its own and at the moment it is robust and optimistic despite the negative signals from the stock market.”

“In addition to the general hiring picture being bright, there is particular strength in the outlook for jobs in the durable goods manufacturing and general services industries — the two largest employment sectors in our society,” he added.

While the financial market collapse caused a great deal of concern and fear for the future of a five-year recovery from the 1982 recession, U.S. business firms are being guided by their own experiences in deciding whether to expand or contract their workforce levels.

The decisions seem to be going strongly in favor of increased hiring to meet current needs.

A combination of “lean” staffing levels established several years ago and a demographic shortage of young workers is causing firms to increase the pace of hiring activity, the report concluded.

Manpower Inc. conducts the Employment Outlook Survey on a quarterly basis. It is a measurement of employer intentions to increase or decrease the permanent workforce and during its 12-year history has been a significant indicator of employment trends.

The survey, conducted during the last two weeks of November, is based on telephone interviews with more than 13,000 public and private employers in 405 U.S. cities.

Registration procedures once you’ve qualified for Express Registration

THIRD TRIMESTER REGISTRATION PROCEDURES

Beginning on Wednesday, February 10, the Official Express Registration List will be circulated throughout the campus. This list will be posted in all classroom lounges. If your name appears on the list, you have Qualified for participation in Express Registration.

I. Instructions for those who Have Qualified for Express:

Express Registration Day is Wednesday, February 17 between the hours of 9 a.m. and 4 p.m.

Business Division students report to the Xavier Complex Gym. Culinary Arts students report to the room behind Cafe Commons in the Culinary Arts Academic Center.

In both cases, there is no need to get there early or to cut classes. It is best if students try to pace themselves throughout the day. It is easier to handle a steady flow of people than a huge crowd coming in at one time.

(Special Reminder to Business Students)

If you participated in Express Registration, you will be able to attend the schedule change period set for Thursday, February 18 (9 a.m. to 2 p.m.) in the Dean’s Office at the Academic Center. “Schedule Changes” is an option available ONLY to Express students.

II. Instructions for those students who did not qualify for Express Registration:

February 22 will be traditional registration for business students with last names beginning with A - K.

February 23 will be traditional registration for business students with last names beginning with L - Z.

February 24 will be traditional registration for all culinary students with last names beginning with A - Z.

ALL traditional registration activity will be held in the gymnasium at the Culinary Student Center from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. A continuous shuttle bus will be provided for business students in need of transportation beginning at 9 a.m. from the back of McNulty Hall and returning to the same location.

Student Activities schedule

winter concert, Valentine dance

The Student Activities Office has scheduled two major events for the winter trimester.

The first is a Valentine’s Dance which will be held at the Johnson & Wales Inn at 7:30 p.m. on Saturday, February 11. Semi-formal dress is required and singles are welcome. A buffet dinner will be served.

Free tickets for this event, which must be picked up by Monday, February 8, are available at the Student Activities Office in Plantations Hall and the Culinary Gym. There will be no tickets available at the door.

The second event is the annual Winter Concert, which will feature the Hooters and special guest Concrete Blond. The concert will be held at the Rocky Point Palladium at 8 p.m. on Friday, February 12.
Impact of Hazelwood decision on college press unclear, officials say

Editor's note: The following story was compiled by the College Press Service.

(CPS) — College press observers are "appalled" by a U.S. Supreme Court decision that gives public school officials new, broad authority to censor student newspapers, but are unsure how the January 13 ruling will affect college newspapers in particular.

"It is an appalling decision," said Dr. Louis Ingelhart, the author of several books about student press freedoms and professor emeritus of journalism at Indiana's Ball State University.

"It has serious implications for the high school press. But I don't know what implications it will have for the college press."

"It's a limiting of the First Amendment at a time when colleges are celebrating the 200th anniversary of the Constitution," said Tom Rolnicki, head of the Associated College Press and a University of Minnesota journalism professor. "This is a black day."

"This has the potential for being a devastating case," said Mark Goodman of the Student Press Law Center. "But we have to consider that this is a person to person case that is not dealing directly with the college press, and decisions affecting the college press will be left for another day."

The ruling stemmed from a 1983 incident in which Robert Reynolds, the principal of Hazelwood East High School in suburban St. Louis, refused to let "The Spectrum" — the school's newspaper — publish students' articles about teenage pregnancy and the effects of divorce on children.

When Reynolds ordered the stories deleted, three junior-year students, Kathy Kuhlschier, Lee Ann Tippett-West and Leslie Smart, sued Reynolds and other school officials, contending their freedom of speech had been violated.

In its five-to-three decision, however, the Supreme Court ruled school newspapers, at least those run as part of journalism labs, are not public forums protected by the First Amendment.

Principals and teachers, the court said, "are entitled to regulate the content of" a for-credit newspaper just as they're entitled to regulate the content of any other kind of classroom assignment.

But the classroom argument, when applied to newspapers, panicked many student journalism officials.

"In the long run, it's going to have a devastating effect," said J.H. Hall, a journalism teacher at Kirkwood High School in St. Louis.

"In journalism, in order to report on critical and sensitive issues, you must stress critical thinking skills," the 1982 "High School Journalism Teacher of the Year" said. The Supreme Court decision, Hall lamented, will force high school

Specifics of the Supreme Court's decision

(CPS) — In a January 13 decision, the U.S. Supreme Court exonerated a Missouri high school principal for censoring the school newspaper and, in the process, broadened the rules for administrators trying to control what students publish.

The controversy arose in 1983, when Hazelwood (Mo.) High School Principal Robert Reynolds ordered student journalists to pull articles about teenage pregnancy and divorce from "The Spectrum.

Last month, the court ruled Reynolds had not violated the students' First Amendment rights by doing so.

"School officials did not violate...any intent to open the pages of "The Spectrum" to indiscriminate use by its student reporters or editors, or by the student body generally," Justice Byron R. White wrote in the majority opinion.

"Instead, they reserved the forum for its intended purpose, as a supervised learning experience for journalism students. Accordingly, school officials were entitled to regulate the contents of "The Spectrum" in any reasonable manner," he said.

The Walters make technology come alive

Guitarist Manny Silva knows a thing or two about balance. For the last few years, he's been balancing a musical career with his career as a computer programmer, often incorporating the two. And he and drummer John Ortí have been balancing their musical taxes since forming The Walters last year.

"We kind of act as anchors for each other," Silva said. "John is very influenced by jazz, while I lean more toward the lighter pop sound. As a result of restraining each other, we've managed to reach a happy medium."

The Walters feature a healthy dose of computerized sounds in their music, taking advantage of recent advances in technology. Again, balance is the key.

"When some people think of computerized music, bands like Kraftwerk come to mind. But many of the bands which incorporate computer generated sounds into their music go overboard and lose the human quality. We try to give our technology a human face," he explained.

Prior to joining Ortí and the late Richard Toro in a band called The Three Walters, Silva, a veteran of the local rock scene, played in a number of bands but described the experience as unremarkable.

"There were just too many compromises involved," Silva said. "When you're in a band with four or five other musicians, you often have a situation where everyone is pulling in a different direction. One reason this band is so rewarding is that it's just John and myself and we work well together."

The Walters, who perform on the local club circuit, play only originals, which also makes the experience more rewarding, Silva said.

"You can make a lot of money playing covers in places such as J.R.'s Funhouse, but if that's not what you really want to do, it becomes depressing after a while. Places like that are meccas and it doesn't matter what you play, people will show up," he said.

"By playing originals, you're taking a chance, but when the music goes over well it's much more rewarding," he added.

The band often performs at AS 220 and has been trying to make inroads in the Boston scene, but The Walters have met resistance there because of their use of technology.

"In Boston if you're not playing music with that garage sound, no one wants to listen. We could have tried to fit into that scene or some other scene like heavy metal, but we decided to be true to ourselves and let our music flow naturally."

PPAC to present "Big River" as part of Broadway Series

"Big River: The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn" arrives at the Providence Performing Arts Center for five performances February 19-21.

"Big River," an award-winning musical featuring original music and script by John and Steven Kline and directed by Rob Marshall, is based on Mark Twain's classic novel. The show's music and lyrics are by Elton John and Tim Rice, with direction by Steven Palazzo.

The production features a cast of 50, including the vocal talents of Bill Murray as Huckleberry Finn and Sigourney Weaver as Becky Thatcher. The production is presented by the Providence Performing Arts Center and is sponsored by the Rhode Island Department of Education.

The decision, in concluding Reynolds had acted reasonably, did not use the same standard of review used by the court in a landmark 1969 decision that said public schools may sterilize students' free speech rights only when the student expression is materially disruptive or invades the rights of others. In that case, the court said a high school had acted wrongly when it banned students from wearing anti-war armbands.

The 1969 standard, White said, "need not be the standard for determining when a school may refuse to lend its name and resources to the dissemination of public expression. "Educators do not offend the First Amendment by exercising control over the style and content of student speech in school-sponsored expressive activities so long as their actions are reasonably related to legitimate pedagogical concerns," White continued. "A school must be able to take into account the emotional maturity of the intended audience in determining whether to disapprove student speech on potentially sensitive topics."

The dissenting judges — Justices William J. Brennan, Thurgood Marshall and Harry A. Blackmun — blasted the decision as condoning "thought control," adding, "Such unthinking contempt for individual rights is inexcusable."

TO YOUR HEALTH

This article was taken from the University of California, Berkeley "Wellness Letter," September 1987

Blood: A most precious gift

Health officials know it can be hard to capture people's attention, but on one subject public awareness has been drastically altered. In September 1985, according to a survey by ABC News, only a third of Americans perceived AIDS as "the greatest public health problem facing this nation." By March 1987, 64 percent of those surveyed felt that AIDS was this nation's number one health problem.

And yet, this same survey showed that at least one AIDS myth persists: almost half of the people surveyed thought they could acquire the AIDS virus by donating BLOOD. THERE IS NO RISK IN DONATING BLOOD.

Part of this confusion may arise from the recent government recommendation that people who received blood transfusions between 1978 and early 1985 be tested for antibodies to the human immunodeficiency virus (HIV), particularly in such areas as New York City and San Francisco, where the incidence of AIDS is high.

There have been about 750 reported cases of transfusion-related AIDS in the United States, and it is estimated that 12,000 Americans may have been infected by HIV from transfusions before donated blood was routinely tested for the presence of AIDS antibodies. Now that rigorous new screening procedures are in use, however, the risk is remote: one in 48,000 to 1 million, depending on the part of the country. Not only is blood screened, but all blood products are now treated so that they are AIDS free.

But the risk of infection from GIVING blood has always been nil. Blood banks use sterile, throwaway needles and collection equipment. There's no way a donor could be exposed. Still, unfounded fears have contributed to a worsening blood shortage. And so has AIDS itself.

In San Francisco, for example, gay men used to make up almost one third of all blood donors. Now that people in AIDS risk groups are no longer allowed to donate blood (including IV drug abusers and prostitutes) it is the all the more important for eligible donors to donate.

In addition, if you would like further information concerning AIDS, you can contact PI PROJECT AIDS at 277-6602 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., the Rhode Island Department of Health at 277-2362 from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. or come by the Health Service Office at Culinary or McNally Hall. Remember donating blood can be your most precious gift to anyone.

NOTE: There will be a Blood Drive — February 16 at Xavier Complex Gym (11 a.m. to 4 p.m.) and Culinary Gym (11 a.m. to 6 p.m.)
