CQ Researcher

New/Old Database: CQ Researcher

We are happy to announce the return of CQ Researcher to our list of library databases this year. CQ Researcher provides students with a great place to start when researching a wide variety of topics. It particularly excels at controversial issues. One can access the information in different ways such as keyword searches or by browsing. The browsing feature, for example, allows one to select Energy, Renewable Energy Resources and Alternative Fuels, and then be able to choose from the following reports:

- Energy Efficiency
- Alternative Fuels
- Energy Security
- Nuclear Waste

The screenshot shows a web browser window with the following content:

Chronology

1900-1960s
Fuel demand surges during the world wars, but renewables can't compete with fossil fuels.

1908
Ford's Model T becomes the first mass-produced vehicle capable of running on gasoline, ethanol or a combination of the two.

1917-1918
Wartime demand for ethanol surges to 60 million gallons per year.

1919
Prohibition squelches ethanol's commercial viability. In the next decade, oil companies toy with using it to eliminate knocking in engines and

1974
The first legislative effort to promote ethanol as a fuel — the Solar Energy Research, Development and Demonstration Act — leads to widespread research into ways of converting cellulose into fuel.

1975
The government begins to phase out the use of lead as a fuel additive, making ethanol more attractive as a substitute to boost octane.

1979
Amoco Oil Co. begins selling alcohol-blended fuels and is quickly followed by other major oil companies. Congress approves spending some $1 billion on biomass-related projects.

1987
The Austrian company Gaskoks acquires South African technology and opens the first commercial biodiesel plant.

1990s-Present
States and the federal government mandate that fleet vehicles use more renewable fuels. Tight oil supplies and occasional supply disruptions spur more interest in alternative fuels.

1998
The ethanol subsidy is extended through 2007, but its size is gradually reduced, from 54-cents-per-gallon

- Renewable Energy
- Nuclear Fusion

Each of these comes in a relatively standardized format which contains an overview of the topic along with background information and the current situation and outlook. Each report also contains pro and con essays from noted experts on the topic and a helpful chronology page. The chronology page (such as the one seen below) helps one to organize a paper along a chronological timeline (not the only way but a very common way to organize a required report). When doing a report on a topic and utilizing the CQ Researcher database it is important to note that other sources should be used as well, however, CQ is a great place to start. One last piece of advice when using CQ... If you print, it is best to pull up the .pdf version (by clicking on that option in the upper right hand corner of the screen). This will give you a much clearer copy of the material..

Holy Trinity Greek Orthodox Cathedral - 600 East Blvd., Charlotte, NC

Be sure to check out the marketplace with a variety of vendors where you can purchase jewelry, crafts, and gifts. However, the best part of the Greek festival is the food. Enjoy roasted lamb, Grecian baked chicken, spanakopita, Greek salads, baklava, gyro and souvlaki sandwiches. While you enjoy your meal, you can watch youth and adults from Holy Trinity dancing in traditional Greek costumes. There are games and activities for children as well. Before you leave, stop by the cathedral to learn more about the Greek Orthodox religion and to see the beautiful iconography. Tours of the cathedral are conducted on the hour throughout the festival.

Profile of Alice Waters

Alice Waters, chef, business owner, writer, and slow food advocate is coming to Charlotte in September for two days. Her visit is sponsored by both Charlotte Shout and Slow Food Charlotte. She will be speaking here at Johnson & Wales University. Watch the Campus Update for the date, time, and place.

Waters owns Chez Panisse, Chez Panisse Café and Café Fanny in Berkeley, California. The cuisine at Chez Panisse is credited with changing the eating habits of people since it's opening in 1973. Here the diner finds local ingredients being used in the menus. As a chef and business owner, Waters seeks to be in relationship with the people who supply the restaurant's food.

Waters is the author and co-author of numerous books including Chez Panisse Cooking and Chez Panisse Café Cookbook. The books offer the best recipes from the restaurants, using locally grown food. A new book, The Art of Simple Food: Notes, Lessons, and Recipes from a Delicious Revolution, is scheduled to be published later this year.

Today, Waters' interests include the Edible Schoolyard and the Slow Food program. The Edible Schoolyard is a campaign to get local foods into schools and to use the gardens at the schools to teach children. Slow Food is an international organization that supports artisan food makers. Waters has also been a strong advocate for farmer's markets.

To learn more about Alice Waters, check-out the book, Alice Waters and Chez Panisse, by Thomas McNamee along with her numerous titles.

These titles are available in the Charlotte campus library:

How to Start well and Finish well?

What makes the ordinary everyday special? At the beginning of this new school year, a book I just reread has made me think about this question in new ways. I have a lot of things I tell myself when I get stuck in the reality of everyday, that time when hours are long, energy wanes, and frustration builds. I think we all do, or at least we should have, things that keep us going when presented with various trials, in other words “Life.” I tell myself that “if I keep going I’ll get there” or “that everything that happens is an opportunity.” I believe that if I work at doing the next thing I know how to well; then, when it comes to what I don’t know how to do, I’ll find the courage to work it out. How does one start well and finish well? How does one succeed?

I always like new beginnings a lot!! Especially when my mind is crowded or things don’t seem to be going right; even a day away for a mental and emotional break seems to help me look at everything with new perspective. New beginnings present chances to dream again, time to make changes and take chances, and opportunities for new choices. Endings are great too! Endings provide us with special times for celebrating all that has been accomplished; but what are we about during all the ordinary everyday happenings which take place between beginnings and endings?

Andy Andrews, author of The Traveler’s Gift, made me take another look at what it means to succeed. I want to start this year out with high hopes; but even more I don’t want those hopes to disappear into thin air. I want to end the year having learned something new by taking some chances and making some changes. Reading The Traveler’s Gift helped me see that it would do me good to have some new tools for keeping hope alive everyday. I could benefit with ways to began anew more often.

The Traveler’s Gift introduces a man called David Ponder who has lost hope and seems unable to find a way out of the mess he is in — his own mess. The author takes Ponder and us on a journey to meet 7 historical people who each have a gift to give. Each gift is a way for us not to lose hope during the times between beginning our dreams, changes, or new choices and our special celebrated endings. As we visit with each of these 7 people, we are presented with a means to success in those times when everyday ordinary life has taken hold and there seems to be no end in sight and no hope left.

I love to read; but usually I am not brought to tears when reading a book. While reading this book I was. I am not a Civil War buff. But my visit with Joshua Chamberlain made me see that most of the time the important choices are made during the time between beginnings and endings. Busy going from one thing to another I forget that I have choices. I had to read slowly, to put the book down, and ponder each gift. Two presidents, a king, a civil war general, a navigator, and a German-Jewish teenager gave me hope that my life would change this year. You will find hope too if you pick up The Traveler’s Gift and take some time to go on a journey – actually 7 journeys.

If you have a something you use to get you going when times get hard, then you also have a gift! Between beginnings and endings, when you are faced with various trials, what keeps your hope alive and helps you start again?

Would you let me know so I can share your gift in one of the next issues of “The Queen City Brew?” All of us can use a bit of encouragement and this would be a quick way for you to encourage others in our school community. Just email your gift to: lmeckes@jwu.edu

PostSecret, by Frank Warren

Percolator Book

Everybody loves a secret, right? They tempt you to buy magazines (“The SECRET to...”), watch celebrity biographies on TV (“Blah Blah’s SECRET life”), and spend two hours of your life watching that King Tut show where they promise they’re going to tell you who murdered him and they NEVER do. (I refuse to believe I’m the only one still bitter about that one.) Unlike those perpetual disappointments, PostSecret fully delivers on its promise to bare strangers’ souls. Frank Warren’s art and literature project is a compilation of anonymous postcards on which people reveal their deepest, darkest secrets. From page to page, the secrets strike different chords, some mischievous (“I give decaf to customers who are RUDE to me”) and some sadly introspective (“I hate people who remind me of myself”). Warren provides visual interest by printing the postcards he’s encouraged his soul-barers to use as artwork, and as I read I found myself constantly thinking that I had just seen the coolest postcard, ever. PostSecret won’t tell you who killed King Tut, but I can promise that it will light that creative spark and get you thinking about your own secrets.

Pride of Baghdad,, by Brian K Vaughan and Niko Henrichon

Percolator Book

In 2003, four starving lions dug out of their pen at the Baghdad Zoo to roam the city searching for food. Their uncertain futures were similar to hundreds of other animals at that zoo who were stolen by looters or left to starve by zookeepers forced to flee the fighting. Pride of Baghdad tells the story of these four lions in graphic novel format, combining rapid-fire dialogue with vivid, sometimes shocking illustration. More than just an account of escaped wildlife, this novel explores the choice between freedom and survival that people in war are often forced to make. I highly recommend Pride of Baghdad as an inventive depiction of the war in Iraq - a definite departure from news clips and presidential press releases!

A Taste for Literature

“And Tom brought him chicken soup until he wanted to kill him. The lore has not died out of the world, and you will still find people who believe that soup will cure any hurt or illness and is no bad thing to have for the funeral either.”

Warren Buffett

Buffett Reads

My selection this month features the materials we have on Warren Buffett, the highly successful investor, businessperson, and philanthropist. Named second richest person in the world by Forbes in April of 2007, Buffett's net worth is estimated at over 52 billion dollars today. (Forbes.com)

I am using the term “read” in the broadest possible sense...you can read a book, magazine, or website, and you can also get a read on something by listening or watching. Books, audio books and DVDs are just three varieties of materials that the library has to offer! But, as you can see from the reference above there are many types of reading and yes, blogs do count. Just be aware that you will find information from both experts and crackpots on the Internet. Find out who the author is, what his or her credentials are, be conscious of any bias, and always verify the information.

Biographies and other works written by or about well-known people offer insight into their private lives, their struggles and accomplishments, and the time in which they live (d). The road to success or failure can be a superhighway or a slow and winding back road. We can learn much from reading and studying the journeys of others. For a crash course on Warren Buffett you might try the following.

Buffett & Gates Go Back to School, PBS Home Video

Graduate students from the University Of Nebraska College Of Business Administration question Warren Buffett and Bill Gates on topics of management, business philosophy, investment, and life. Aside from being two of the wealthiest men in the world, these two men share a common desire to use their wealth to help others. Their answers to student questions are open, honest, lively, and often amusing.

The Real Warren Buffett, by James O’Laughlin

Buffett is known as a down-to-earth, self-made man. If you only know Warren Buffett from the headlines, this book is an excellent resource to learn about his management and investment style. It is a well-written work that expounds upon Buffett's wisdom by offering real-life examples of how his principles have worked in the many companies with which Buffett has forged relationships.

The Tao of Warren Buffett, by Mary Buffett & David Clark

Buffettology is a word coined to describe the study of Warren Buffett's advice on management and investment. His wisdom is distilled in this audio book to simple principles and short examples of how they have worked in his career. This format works well with an audio book, though from time to time you may find yourself turning off the audio player for a few minutes to ponder Buffett's ideas.

Learning about someone like Buffett can be fun – watching the DVD and laughing at the self-effacing humor these two men share; thought provoking – listening to the audio and connecting Buffett's principles to your own life and philosophy; and enriching – in both the knowledge gained and the potential for investment advice that may serve the book's reader well.

Oh, and by the way...Buffett reads! When asked by a student in Buffett & Gates Go Back to School, what super power he would like to have, his answer? He would like to be a super fast reader. As a youth he is and, by the way, Buffett Reads

Oh, and by the way...Buffett reads! When asked by a student in Buffett & Gates Go Back to School, what super power he would like to have, his answer? He would like to be a super fast reader. As a youth he is reported to have read every book on finance in the Omaha Public Library. In the DVD, The Tao of Warren Buffett, his advice to a student on the most important business course was accounting. Buffett says that "accounting is the language of business," and he believes that the ability to read financial reports is paramount to a successful business career. Jeff Matthews of Kudlow and Company, LLC, an economic research and consulting firm, reports that Buffett's advice to attendees of this year's annual meeting of Berkshire-Hathaway was to "Read everything you can." (Matthews)

As a librarian and an avid reader, I can say that I wholeheartedly agree with that statement. I feel that it is important, no matter what your chosen career path, to read all you can about it.

See you in the library!
