Reasons to Read: Periodicals

In honor of the opening of the Percolator, this month's reasons to read bring you the fun side of our library's periodicals. To assist our students in fashion and hospitality programs we have many subscriptions to fashion, tourism, and sports magazines. So, along with trade publications and scholarly journals we carry such popular magazines as Sports Illustrated, Condé Nast Traveler, Elle, InStyle, ESPN, GQ, Essence, Glamour and more! You'll be able to find the latest copy of these magazines in the Percolator area of the library and older versions can still be found on our shelves. So why pay newsstand prices when you can visit the library, settle into one of the cozy chairs in the Percolator area and catch up on some of your favorite magazines?

Elle – February's issue features Gwen Stefani modeling the latest spring Dior, Gucci, and Chanel and talking about "her hit addiction, yodeling fantasies, and how she kicked her Madonna habit."

Essence – February is the month of love and Essence features a 28-day dating plan, and a four-page spread where six charming guys took advantage of an offer to propose in print!

Travel & Leisure – Romance in locations near and far, Travel & Leisure presents twenty-five dream trips! Visit a castle in Scotland, tool along a seaside drive in California, ride the Orient-Express from Venice to Paris, or sail down the Nile. Let your mind wander even if you can't.

ESPN – Each month's issue brings the latest in sports. Read game previews and game reviews, along with hard hitting articles, like "Why the NFL Needs HGH," about the use of human growth hormone in the NFL; and exciting sports features, like "The Power of Glove," about Matt and Danny Kass and the Winter X Games 2007.

InStyle – InStyle's romantic February's issue gives us a peek inside last year's best celebrity weddings. From the lavish wedding of Tom Cruise and Katie Holmes at Odessalchi Castle near Rome, to Tori Spelling and Dean McDermont's Fiji Island nuptials, see these dream weddings!

Book Review

Working the Plate: the Art of Food Presentation. Christopher Styler. Photography by David Lazarus. Hoboken, N.J.: John Wiley, 2006. 200 pages TX652.S826 2006

A stylish colorful plate of food is placed on the table. The arrangement of the food, the vibrant colors, and that something extra cause the patron to take a second look. In the kitchen, the chef after artfully arranging the plate with the freshly prepared food experiences satisfaction as the plate leaves the kitchen, heading to the dining room. Are there guidelines for arranging food in harmonious ways? Christopher Styler in new book, Working the Plate: the Art of Food Presentation writes about this art of plating food.

Chef Styler presents eight contemporary approaches to food presentation. At the beginning of each approach, he explains the different elements involved and the ways they work together. Next, examples of that particular style are shown with close-up color photographs of the process involved to create the finished plate. The final section of the book, “Painting the Plate: Sauces and Techniques for Finishing Plates,” includes recipes for the different decorative elements and for the suggested ingredients used throughout the book. He offers the recipes as a blueprint for other dishes that can be prepared in the same style depending upon availability and seasonality of ingredients.

Chef Styler also includes profiles of individual chefs and their personal understanding about the art of plating. The chefs include Marcus Samuelsson, Kent Rathbun, Sharon Hage, Andrew Carmellini, James Laird, Tadashi Ono, Terrance Brennan, Suzanne Goin, Emily Luchetti, and Wayne Harley Brachman. Each chef offers his/her interpretation regarding food presentation. He inserts these chef profiles randomly throughout his book.

Working the Plate: the Art of Food Plating is an excellent introduction to art of plating food. The clear photographs taken by David Lazarus serve to demonstrate the styles being presented. This book offers ideas on this creative art that can be used by the professional chef as well as the beginning cook. In the end, the art of plating food is full of discovery.

A Taste for Literature

“It has been shown as proof positive that carefully prepared chocolate is as healthful a food as it is pleasant; that it is nourishing and easily digested... that it is above all helpful to people who must do a great deal of mental work “

— Anthelme Brillat-Savarin

Fabulous Fiction

by Christine Tran

Jennifer Government

Max Barry

(Percolator : PS 3552 .A7424 J46 2004)

The world Max Barry has created in Jennifer Government is pretty scary. Governments exist no more, and the world is run by corporations. Last names have been abandoned in favor of corporate names (think Hayley McDonald's, Nathaniel ExxonMobil). Police, paramedics and government agents can't provide services without locking in private funding first. In this world ruled by the dollar, a Nike marketing manager develops a brilliant strategy to pump up publicity for new sneakers: shooting teens and stealing their shoes to increase demand. Jennifer Government isn't going to let that fly, and she jumps right into the mix of corporate power plays to capture Hack Nike. Barry's take on corporate ethics gone kaput is a creepily relevant, hilarious adventure.

Island of the Sequined Love Nun

Christopher Moore

(Percolator: PS 3563 .O594 I7 2004)

Christopher Moore is the funniest writer I've ever read, hands down. Moore combines ridiculous circumstances with lovably flawed characters to fool us into thinking that his concoctions might just be possible. In Island of the Sequined Love Nun, Moore presents the story of Tucker Case, former Mary Jean Cosmetics Company pilot. After crashing Mary Jean's plane, Tucker is forced to accept less-than-ideal job on a tiny Micronesian island transporting supplies for a sketchy medical missionary. When he discovers the sketchy medical missionary taking advantage of islanders who worship downed cargo planes, Tucker's conscience kicks in. Tucker, his merry band of island misfits, and a pet fruit bat form a cast of characters that will have you laughing until you hurt.

Just One Look

Harlan Coben

(Percolator: PS 3553 .O225 J96 2005)

Grace Lawson's life changed forever at the Jimmy X Band show. Panicked by a gunshot, the crowd stampedes and leaves Grace with lifelong injuries. She's well on the way to putting the ordeal behind her until someone slips a photograph of that evening into a package of family snapshots. When she tells her husband about the picture, she's surprised at his barely concealed fear. Later that evening, he leaves the house and never returns. Grace knows that he didn't leave her- but, she's the only one. Coben propels Grace through a maze of secrets that begin with that night at the Jimmy X concert, forcing her to confront her fears (and a really creepy serial-killer) to solve her husband's disappearance.

Who Wants an MLA Tip??

When I get an MLA citation printed or emailed with an article from one of the online databases at Johnson & Wales, is it correct for me to use the citation exactly as it is printed?

Do you know that some of the online research databases provided by the Johnson & Wales library give you the option to have an MLA citation printed out or emailed to you for future use? It is a great idea to ask for the citation information to be printed or emailed to you; but, if you do, when you get ready to compose your “Works Cited” page you will usually have to add some items which are not included by an online database even though they are needed for your citation to be correct.

One item that you will always have to add is the name of the institution that makes it possible for you to have access to the database. Since Johnson & Wales pays for you to have access to our online databases, the name of the institution you would place in the citation for items that are accessed from our library site is Johnson & Wales University, Charlotte. The name of the institution which gives you access to a database is at the top of the site when you sign-in.

Another item that you will need to add is the name of the organization that developed or created the database. Usually the developer of a database will be labeled at the top of the page after signing onto the site. For example when signing onto Academic Search Premier you will see EBSCOhost Research Databases so you would enter the name EBSCOhost in your citation. This is the company that developed the database Academic Search Premier. If you open the link and review the instructions when you receive a citation, you will find a note that tells you who the developer of the database is and where you gained access to the database.

For instance if you used Academic Search Premier and found the article entitled “Major World Religions” in The Futurist magazine of Sept-Oct, 2006, to be useful for your research you would want to have the citation information for future use. So, by all means, check the option for an MLA citation to be included when printing or emailing; but when you get the citation it will read:

“Major World Religions.” Futurist 40:5 (2006):32-32. Academic Search Premier.
10 January 2007. <<http://search.ebscohost.com>>

After you add the creator of the database and how you gained access to the database the correct citation would be:

“Major World Religions.” Futurist 40:5 (2006):32-32. EBSCOhost. Academic Search Premier. Johnson and Wales U, Campus Lib., Charlotte. 10 January 2007. <<http://search.ebscohost.com>>

When paraphrasing or quoting a source, if you are not sure whether you need to cite it in your paper, it is better to use a citation. It is less of a problem for a professor to say you did not need a citation then for you to use someone else’s material or idea and not cite it.

Linda Meckes

Guess What’s New!???

Previously students could only check out either three books or two books and one video. BUT NOW students can now check-out ANY three items regardless of whether they are books or videos!!!

Avoiding Plagiarism

It's in the news again. Plagiarism. A notable Midwestern university has discovered that plagiarism has been "rampant" in one of its graduate departments for twenty years. Over several months, it has dealt comprehensively with the situation, recommending disciplinary action for past offenses and remedies to prevent future occurrences.

That is an extreme example of plagiarism. Whole papers were apparently copied; many individuals were involved; and it went on for years. What is less extreme, but what is still plagiarism, is copying parts of someone else's work without attribution to them, knowingly or not.

It's a Big Deal

Even unintentional plagiarism is serious business. It's easy to quote someone else and inadvertently forget to cite the source. Some very important and well-known authors have unwittingly done similar things through sloppy--or not quite careful enough--research.

(See <http://www.web-miner.com/plagiarism#pgcases> for some other examples that have made the news.)

It's easy to understand how it happens. When you're writing a research paper you have lots of files open, you visit lots of Web sites, and you have lots of ideas going around in your head. It's easy to copy and paste a quote and forget to note the source of that quote. It's easy to copy a whole section of someone else's work so you can think about it, and then forget to actually think about it...indeed, you may even think you have thought about it and that these are your own words!

Even if you don't mean to plagiarize, doing it has important consequences. Several famous authors have had their reputations seriously damaged when unintentional plagiarism was discovered. Some have lost jobs. If it happens with a school paper or a thesis, you may fail the assignment or course, lose your degree, or worse. Many schools and professors now use plagiarism detection services like Turnitin (<http://www.turnitin.com/>) to compare submitted papers with a database of previous work and show if there are too many similarities.

How to Be Careful

There are several steps to take to avoid plagiarism.

1. It's usually better to paraphrase ideas than to quote.

Read the source and then put the idea into your own words. But even when paraphrasing, you need to give credit to the original source!

2. Whenever you use a fact, phrase, chart, or quotation from someone else in your work, give credit to the original source.

3. Keep careful notes of every source you consult when working on a paper. Use a reference citation system, such as EndNote, Reference Manager, or ProCite to keep your notes in order. (Ask a librarian for tips on accessing the software and using the system recommended for papers in your subject.)

4. Never copy and paste anything from the Internet without also copying the URL where you found it. Later, when you may not be sure whether you're quoting or not, you will be able to go back to the same page, check the wording, and give a proper citation.

5. If you think you may be using something without attribution, copy and paste the passage into Google or another search engine. If your search comes up with close hits, your passage may well not be original work!

Bottom Line

Plagiarism, intentional or not, is serious business. Be aware of how easy it is to misappropriate other work. Take careful steps to minimize the chances of making mistakes in your research. When in doubt, you can always consult a librarian, a professor, or the Center for Academic Support for help in organizing and carrying out the research process.

What is the Arts & Sciences Council???

What is the Arts & Sciences Council?

According to the ASC web site (www.artsandscience.org): "The Arts & Science Council is a proactive, nonprofit organization that provides the planning, oversight and funding required to ensure and support a vibrant and culturally diverse art, science and history community in Charlotte/Mecklenburg for the education of our children and the enjoyment of all residents."

So what exactly does that mean!?

While the ASC supports arts and sciences in a variety of ways, you don't go see a play at the ASC, learn about electricity at the ASC, or see rehabilitated birds at their offices. That said, these are the kinds of "causes" that it supports. The Arts & Science Council provides partial funding through grants to many organizations you probably have heard of such as the Mint Museum, Charlotte Museum of History, Discovery Place, Carolina Raptor Center, The Light Factory, Blumenthal Center for the Performing Arts, Children's Theatre, Actor's Theatre, Carolina Voices, etc. They also provide smaller grants for other arts-related projects and artists in the area.

How big a deal is this thing?

Just take a look at how it ranks against similar organizations in other cities:

5 Largest Local Arts Agencies
Revenues in US – FY 2003

1. New York $121.9 million
2. Charlotte $16.5 million
3. San Jose $15.9 million
4. Dallas $14.7 million
5. Los Angeles $12.1 million

(www.artsandsciencecouncil.org)

Does J&W have a special relationship with ASC or any of the ASC affiliate organizations?

Absolutely. Not only do J&W staff members such as myself serve on board's for affiliates, President Gallagher is on the ASC Board itself! Many of these organizations have gone out of their way to provide our students with special opportunities to connect with culture.

So, what is this Arts & Science Council campaign all about?

It's not just about supporting arts but rather about helping to build strong cultural institutions in the city of Charlotte. When we talk about the United Way campaign the question is "what can you do right now about those in immediate need?" When we talk about the ASC campaign the question you should ask is "what kind of a city would you like this to be 10 or 15 years from now?"

I hope this has been at least somewhat informative. I encourage all faculty and staff to consider participating in this year's campaign. Our goal is to increase participation at any level! The bulk of the funds which support this drive are smaller amounts from individual donors!?!? There is no excuse. You can make a difference!!! I also encourage all faculty, staff, and students to find out more about these great organizations. Go and visit a museum! See a show! Adopt a bird!
