First Impressions
Worth Thousands

When foodservice equipment pioneer Dr. J. Harrison Holman visited Johnson & Wales University for the dedication of a new commercial kitchen, he was so impressed with the famous culinary school that he decided to donate $25,000 for a scholarship fund in memory of his beloved brother, Douglas Marshall Holman.

“My brother Douglas was a born teacher,” Dr. Holman said. “He was happiest in that role. All the while I was at Johnson & Wales, I kept thinking of Douglas and his love of teaching. With that in mind, our family wants to honor him by creating a scholarship in his name for deserving students at Johnson & Wales.”

Meet Mayor Vincent A. Cianci, Jr.
The Possibilities of Providence continue......

by Rebecca Smith

The questions may seem simple-to whom do they concern? You and I, are among the elite, the individuals who just happen to benefit from this unique little city, which is home to over 169,000 individuals, varying in delightful talents and creativity.

In 1636 Roger Williams discovered a natural spring in a park downtown, he gave thanks to the water he drank on behalf of "Gads Providence". Also, Providence became the capital in a Little Ocean State which was the official 13th Star and Stripes on our American Flag.

Ironically, facts such as these are not common knowledge for many of us, just as intriguing as several unknown tid-bits of our city Providence, a place where politics has its own special feature.

Mayor, Vincent A. 'Buddy' Cianci, Jr. has been striving influence within a city which has been growing with the Renaissance appeal for the last 360 years. Buddy has influenced 17 of the last 23 years and witnessed Providence climbing the charts of America's top rated cities, for living, dining, and entertainment. It should be noted that Providence has the largest number of working artists per capita in the nation.

Friday, March 13, 1998, where Mayor Buddy held the privilege of spending some valuable time with our Mayor, Our Buddy, Vincent A. Cianci, Jr. in his office in City Hall. I was informed about additional facts on Providence Arts District and the residential opportunities on South Providence which the Mayor has done with the help of Missy Ojeda since January 1, 1997. He proudly pronounced Providence and its individuals. Cianci has stated that "Art is what gets people excited, what entertains them. It makes them feel good about themselves".

Providence is slightly smaller than 1 square mile, with 50 blocks making up downtown and its spectacular sights and sounds. What was once a manufacturing town during the 1800's is now the home of the first state in the country to invite artists from major cities such as Boston and New York, to join an explosion of possibilities growing here, in Providence.

With such a diverse population, it is no surprise that there are some shining stars within our neighborhood. It hardly shocks me anymore to discover another reason that "this is a small world".

Intern with your buddy

Internships in the office of Vincent A. Cianci, Jr., Mayor of Providence, give Johnson & Wales University students first-hand experience working in local government in Rhode Island's capital city through various departments, including Special Events, and Communications.

Interns have shared ideas and responsibilities with others from Brown University, Bryant College, Roger Williams University, Rhode Island College, Providence College, and the University of Rhode Island.

Michael Fontaine ('98), a Management major from Pawtucket, worked in the Communications Office doing administration during his internship. Michael administered and worked to improve the internship program at the Mayor's Office. He said, "I really enjoyed the internship. It was interesting to see the wheels of municipal government in action."

John Repucci ('99), a Criminal Justice major from Plymouth, Mass., worked in Special Events and for the Advance Team during his internship. "I got first-hand exposure to the workings of the Mayor's Office and what kind of work is put behind the scenes to make things run smoothly," he said.

Dawn Everlina Cox ('99), a Criminal Justice major from Brooklyn, filled with a plethora of personalities, making up one interesting city. A city where eligible artists and performers pay no state income tax on what they sell, and their customers pay no sales tax on what they buy. As stated by the New York Times, "Providence has turned into an arts and entertainment empowerment zone".

The city also offers breaks to property owners who agree to improve and maintain old, unused buildings to turn them into residential buildings. This tax exemption has even covered income from out-of-state sales and performances. Just one of those little facts to impress those "back home" or those just visiting. This is our home, this is our Providence. Thank You Buddy!

As stated in a recent article, my first arrival to Providence, in 1994, did not include a tour of Waterplace Park. Today, there are concerts, art exhibits, concerts, art exhibits.

A True Story
by Raquel Hernandez and Gina A. Vigorito

The love of your life, so it seems at the time, gives you a gift. A gift you don’t want. A gift you want to return. A gift so heinous that you want to destroy this man’s... this boy’s soul. 1991. It began in high school. This is supposed to be the time of friendships, of courting, of beginnings and ends, of dances, parties, and homework. This is supposed to be a time to experience, enjoy, and be adventurous. High school is difficult enough without dealing with a marriage and a baby. Raquel Hernandez met, fell in love, and married Alfonso before she even received her high school diploma.

"Why did you marry so young?" I asked.

"While having unprotected sex, I became pregnant. Not believing in abortions, I decided to have the baby and marry Alfonso for the baby’s sake.” April 12, 1992. Andrea was born to the young troubled couple. Alfonso decided to join the Marines in an attempt to better their lives. But, their souls soon took a major test.

Sweet 16. Alfonso calls to wish her a Happy Birthday. He also tells her of his "gift". During a routine check-up for the military he tested HIV positive. Apparently, two years before he met Raquel, he had unprotected sex.

"This Mother Fu%$@!!!" she thought. "I can’t believe he would pull some s-- like this.” Then the phone died. Hours later, after absorbing the news, she went to her friend to a local hospital.

November 12, 1993. "My daughter and I found out the dreaded news that we are both HIV positive, and once again, I thought ‘MOTHER Fu%$@!!!’ How could he do this to us. Then I began to realize the ramifications of this deadly disease. My Andrea, so young and innocent, would never grow up and flourish into a young adult. As her mother, I was more concerned and upset at the fact that she would never have the opportunities to do the simple things I was experiencing as her mother.

I felt that I needed to take the necessary measures and seek out the professional help to prolong both our medical health and to ensure the quality of life we both deserve, rich with love and empowerment.”

January 30, 1994. The overwhelming guilt and anguish Alfonso felt finally caught up to him; he felt ashamed and responsible for giving his family this life long debilitating disease. After being "missing in action" for three months, he showed up at Raquel’s doorstep.

"On a cold, dry damp day, low and behold, a knock at the door rang through the house. I went and answered the door, only to find Alfonso on the other side. Bewildered by his presence, I stood there, frozen and unable to move or speak. He just looked at me and said, ‘My family disowned me. Would you take me back?’

Should I slam the door and forget about him or do I let him in and make his life a living hell. Remembering payback’s a bitch, I let him in. During the remaining year, he and I made a consciencous effort to work things out by remembering we were still married.

We attempted to live like most married people. We used to go to church and all the things people do."

A Multicultural Exchange: One America
by Joanna Medley-Chapman

Multicultural Week was celebrated from April 20-May 1. One America in the 21st Century, “The President’s Initiative on Race,” one of the featured programs, was held April 28. This was an open forum sponsored by Bernardett Pitts-Wiley, Director of the Multicultural Center, and facilitated by Professor Thomas Gaines.

The forum focused on issues related to race, culture and communication.

Approximately 100 participants represented the diverse population of the University community. Participants partook in the dynamic, constructive dialogue which was initiated by questions that were distributed to each participant. There was in-depth discussion on every question. The students seemed to enjoy this activity, for they requested that it be an ongoing event. Many showed tremendous interest in participating in this dialogue next year.

The Multicultural Week concluded with the program entitled “Here’s My Story: What’s Yours?” on April 29. It consisted of two outstanding performances. The Rhode Island Feminist Chorus, featured first, sang several beautiful selections, harmonizing in accapella. They sang about social consciousness, political and government oppression, friendship, acceptance and equality. They use the strength and spirit of music to build an awareness of issues demanding change.

The second contribution to this program was a mother/daughter duet performed by Rev. Paula M. Benishade Sanders and Kennyyta Sanders. Their “Our Journey’s Song” created an exciting tapestry through drama/storytelling and music collaborations. Together, they packaged a powerful message of hope for youth and family regeneration through their style of musical dramatization.

The students enjoyed both of these programs, finding them to be inspiring attributes in enhancing their knowledge and understanding of other cultures. Both of these enriching lineups were held in the Multicultural Center. If you missed out this year, we will be looking forward to seeing you next year.

The Caribbean Students Association (CSA) held its annual Caribbean Festival on April 18. The festival was divided into two subsections: the day and night events. The day event was held at the Hospitality Center from noon until 5pm. This section of the festival was developed to highlight the University community and the general public the cultural, geographical and culinary aspects of the Caribbean Islands.

Twelve Islands were represented at the fest: Bahamas, Barbados, Cuba, Dominican Republic, Grenada, Guyana, Haiti, Jamaica, Puerto Rico, Trinidad and Tobago, and Martinique (MV) and the Netherlands Antilles, and the U.S. Virgin Islands.

The Caribbean Festival organizers considered the day event to be a success as a cross section of people from the general public and the University community attended the festival.

As the day event came to a close, the work was far from over as the participants had to clean up Hospitality Center in order to prepare for the night event. This night event took place at the renowned party spot, Bootleggers, from 9pm to 2am. The purpose of the event was to offer New England, JUW, and the public a taste of the Caribbean by providing enjoyment by various artists.

The entertainers present were: Some Love (main attraction), Connie T, Specialists, Evalast featuring Jusneya, Dazzle, Tuku and Stichie. This festival surpassed the organizers expectations and school officials as a display of camaraderie and enjoyment was demonstrated.

In conclusion, on behalf of the Caribbean Student Association and the Caribbean Festival organizers, Gina Phillips-Gay (chair person) and Michelle Marshall (co-chair) would like to acknowledge and thank the following people: Banquet Manager (JW Inn) Chef (JW Inn) Charles Gibbs (Kitchen Co-ordinator & MC for the day event) Michelle Marszalk (Director of Student Life) Jina Minaya (Executive Officer) Pam Peters (Culinary Faculty) Mark Rushie (Kitchen Co-ordinator) Chris Wall (Assistant Director of Student Life) Tanaya Walters (CSA Advisor) Island Representatives for the various islands Kitchen personnel and management of Hospitality Center Security Personnel of JUW as well as all those who made the event a success. We say a heart felt thanks and we look forward to organizing the event next year.

Mercury Rising

Mercury Rising, this less than ordinary suspense motion picture, revolves around the protection of a nine year old boy who has cracked the government's two billion dollar coding system. Mercury Rising stars Alec Baldwin and Bruce Willis, and is directed by Harold Becker.

This lack lustre film did nothing to enhance the potential plot trying to be introduced. The majority of the movie is spent in a cat and mouse game between the man protecting the child and the assassins trying to kill him.

Willis plays Art, a FBI agent thrown into the case after being demoted for job-related misbehaviors. Due to past wrong doings, he is resigned to a different department where circumstances in his new job position lead him to veer off from the government influence and discover a truth the lower levels in government have yet to unfold.

Willis plays this character with all the grit he is known for having from all the other similar type characters he has played in his career. However, this character gave the viewer and opportunity to see a softer side of Willis as he cares for the nine year old.

Baldwin plays his acting rival CoJack, who is a top government agent responsible for the governments most classified secrets. Accompanying these characters is also a host of other characters thrown into the story line by minute details and associations.

The lack of character development left the viewer disappointed, not to mention the lack of follow through of the importance of the relationship between events and characters.

Mercury Rising leaves much to be desired. The movie jumps from one chase to another leaving the viewer never to see an end in sight.

L.A. Confidential

Recently, we paid a visit to the home of the film's director, Sherry Hormann. As we were leaving, we decided to visit the offices of Variety and the New York Times to get a behind-the-scenes look at how the film was received. The Variety offices were small but well-lit, with a few chairs and a desk. The New York Times offices were larger, with more space and a more professional atmosphere.

The Object of My Affection

The Object of My Affection, based on the novel by Stephen McCauley, stars Jennifer Aniston and Paul Rudd. This light-hearted romantic comedy explores the relationship between a straight woman who falls in love with her gay best friend. This mismatched duo is thrown into an array of events that bonds them together and tears them apart. Having to compromise on her own true feelings, Nina, played by Aniston, has to come to the realization of knowing she can never have what she truly wants. She is forced to make the decision of remaining friends with the object of her affection and allowing him to be the person he is, which is the reason she fell in love with him in the first place.

This movie makes you think of all the things in life you want but can't have through no fault of your own. The movie celebrates the trials and tribulations of true friendship, making one grow from self-sacrifice to accepting the fact that things sometimes can't be changed.

Aniston, best known from the hit TV show Friends and from Picture Perfect, plays a refreshing portrayal of Nina, a pregnant social worker in NY. This heartfelt role left the viewer sympathizing with the emotional roller coaster she experiences. Aniston did a better job with the role than she would have thought. She was able to show her true acting ability in this role because it allowed her to explore aspects of a character unlike her typical roles.

Rudd, a relative new comer to the screen, plays George, a lovable accepted gay first grade teacher in a very wealthy upperclass community in NYC. Suddenly, dumped by his current beau, George finds himself needing a place to live. Taking up house in Nina's spare bedroom, their unique friendship blossoms. Struggling with his own personal issues of loss, exceptions and life, he deals with the highs and lows of their friendship as he searches for love and happiness.

A must see for any true romantic at heart. This emotional movie keeps the viewer engaged and waiting to see what will unfold next. The Object of My Affection is a movie you wish will never end. It leaves you wanting to experience more of the characters and their everyday lives. This movie proves the point that everything you want or expect to happen in life does not always come through. However, the inevitable result are sometimes better than what you wanted from the beginning.

The Big Hit

Tri-Star Pictures presents The Big Hit, starring Mark Wahlberg, Lee Diamond, Phillips, Boboem Woodbine, and Antonio Sabato Jr, made by the creator of Once Upon a Time in America.

The scene portrayed as an action thriller was more like an action comedy. If your looking for crashes, blow ups and gun fire exchanges—this movie has it but not in the way you would think. The seriousness you would think much recent would bring is not there, but rather an intertwining and multitude of cute and comical dialogue and events occur.

The Big Hit is about a group of professional hit men who accidentally kidnap the god-daughter of their notorious crime boss. Not releasing the true identity of the kidnapped—these gentlemen are divided as one is called to find and assassinate the godchild and the other who is involved. The series of events that occurred took the viewers on a wild ride not knowing what would or could happen next.

Despite what advertisements want you to believe the two main characters are played by Leon Diamond and Mark Wahlberg. All other actors portrayed in the role played small or bit parts.

Wahlberg continues to build his career as he plays a shy and insecure professional hit man who gets in over his head by fellow assassins by being manipulated by his innocuousness. His great character portrayed made the viewer sympathetic with his predicament.

Phillips plays a cynical self-righteous hit man who has little to no regard for others. Trying to cover his own case for the things he has done wrong, he blames his co-worker for his wrong doing. The other characters, as stated before, may hold a total of 15 minutes of screen time. This movie is generally good if you go in with an open mind and want to be entertained. The Big Hit inevitably a movie to see on the big screen, so the action scenes and special effects can be appreciated. If you are in search for an action thriller movie, The Big Hit may disappoint you, however it is well worth seeing if for no other reason than for the comic twists.

Music News

- All artist participating in this year’s Tibetan Freedom Concert have been officially banned from China and all of its territories by the Chinese government. The Chinese government says that these individuals have no place in commenting on the internal affairs of China. This is mostly because China isn’t too keen on the idea of the rest of the world finding out about its human rights violations. The purpose of the Tibetan Freedom Concert is to raise awareness of the human rights conditions in not only Tibet, but China as well.

- Scheduled to play at this year’s show are the Beastie Boys, Beck, Dave Matthews, Kraftwerk, Blues Traveller, Sonic Youth, the Wallflowers, U2, and many, many others.

- For Bjork fans disappointed that she pulled off from the Radiohead Spiritualized tour, you’ll be happy to know that she’s on her way to do a tour of clubs and small theaters across the country starting Saturday May 9th in Boston. She’ll also play shows in New York, Washington D.C., San Francisco, and Los Angeles.

- The rock ‘n roll world got smaller this week when Pearl Jam, Creed Stone Temple Pilots, Days of the New, Alice in Chains, and many others combined to form the same band. They were tired of trying to fool the public into thinking that all of their homogenous songs were actually different from one another. Drunken spokesman Eddie Vedder stated that “since we all sound exactly the same, let’s stop the confusion and make it easier on our fans.”

- The Smashing Pumpkins have been quite busy lately while getting ready for the release of their new album Adore, due out on June 2nd. They’ve announced that they’ve hired forty something rock dinosaur Kenny Arouff who used to play drums for John Cougar Mellencamp and John Fogerty, to tour with them on the H.O.R.D.E. tour this summer. In other Smashing Pumpkins news, Billy Corgan is still bald.

- Damon Albarn and Graham Coxon of Blur will team up with the Silver Apples for a one off performance at the Meltdown Festival in London on July 5th. Also scheduled to appear at this John Peel organized event are the Jesus and Mary Chain, Spiritualized, Cornershop and many more.

- In other news the Backstreet Boys revealed that they are really Color Me Bad and that they plan to torture us for another fifteen minutes.

- The Jon Spencer Blues Explosion are now working on a new album with the Dr. Octagon producer Dan “the Automator” Nakamura, due out this fall on Matador Records.

SELCTOR DUB NARCOTIC

The Dub Narcotic Hit Machine Coming out this month will be a collection of songs recorded by everyone who has stopped by the Dub Narcotic studios in Olympia, Washington over the past few years. Music Review Report Card

Buffalo Daughter New Rock Grand Royal, grade: B comments: This album picks up where the last one left off and gets better with each listen. If you like what BD did on their collaborations with Cornelius, Takako Minekawa, and the Natural Calamity project (featuring the Dust Brothers, Kool Keith and more) then don’t miss this one.

DJ Andy Smith The Document London, grade: A comments: Andy is the DJ for Portishead and this album showcases his mixing abilities. The end result is one hell of a mix album featuring everyone from the Jungle Brothers to Tom Jones. Highly recommended.

Killah Priest Heavy Mental Geffen, grade: A+ comments: Another great Wu-Tang solo album. The best rap album so far this year.

Money Mark Push The Button Mo’ Wax, grade: A comments: This will probably be one of the best albums of 98 that no one will notice. Less keyboards this time around and more singing, but still better than ever.

Sean Lennon Into the Sun Grand Royal, grade: B+ comments: This album was inspired by Sean’s girlfriend Yoko, of Cibo Matto. This album is good no matter who his dad was.

Shark Quest Battle of the Lions Merge, grade: B comments: Great instrumental group from the Chapel Hill scene. Album was recorded in Ben Foldes’ house.

Sexy Death Soda

Being from the police state (California) I can easily understand how the ingredients of Sexy Death Soda work on my body. Led by a man and his dream to "Start a revolution of hard workin' fire breathing rock 'n' roll," Sexy Death Soda are poised to take their music and way of life beyond the streets of California and into the homes of impressionable pre-teens everywhere. Kids will soon forget about the Spice Girls and soon find their favorite Sexy Death Soda member to latch onto.

Let's take a closer look at what makes Sexy Death Soda every young man's late night fantasy. First there's the intriguing Steakhouse, who started out singing in Denny's lounges across the country, but ended up getting fired by management for drinking all of their whiskey. Most people thought that Bono was clever when he took to the stage under different personalities and costumes, but the fact of the matter is that he stole the very idea from Steakhouse himself. He doesn't fool around with lame gold cowboy outfits and cool sunglasses, he instead keeps it real with outfits like his Vanilla Flava outfit that is one part Vanilla Ice and one part Flav Flav, or his science fiction astronaut realtor suit. As shown he's known to breath fire and say "I'm going to lion tamer this motherfuckin' Denny's tonight!" Backing up Steakhouse is guitarist Smooth Angus who has been seen on the beaches chanting to burning guitars. You may also remember him as the singer from Nighttranger and Run DMC. Then there's guitarist Dinnie Pleasure who you may have seen in movies like Barbecue Naked and The Flaming Airplane, as well as playing some great licks for Chaka Khan. Pinto Vega, the SDS bass player is a rare breed of man who can breath fire from his nose and can cook flapjacks without a stove. He plays his combination Fordchery bass engine like no ones business. On the sticks is Lisa Demerol who was in a Kool Moe Dee video and is the best sandwich maker in Ventura County at 4:30 in the morning.

Sexy Death Soda sometimes needs to be consumed firsthand to realize how good they really are. Take for example the time when they opened up for the Brian Jonestown Mascara's. Steakhouse was powering down Jack Daniels all night which made the singer of the band morph before his eyes into Oasis, and Crosby, Stills & Nash in a high plane, difter poncho. He then felt the need to approach the stage and yell "I love you Laim,", to which the singer nervously replied back, "stop it or we'll kick your ass." Unfortunately for the Brian Jonestown Mascara's, Steakhouse continued on as the band hoped to impress the record company executives that they wanted to sleep with. "I love to fight and I love your sideburns!" Steakhouse added. Luckily the Brian Jonestown Mascara's were spared from the full wrath of the Sauce as he decided to spare them from further torture.

I recently contacted one of the great musicians of our era, Ross Harris of the top 40 pop group Sukis to see how he felt about Sexy Death Soda since he has experienced them first hand. He made the observation that "Sexy Death Soda deep frys every power lick that explodes out of their smoke machine," and when going to see them play "they make me want to have a sonic six pack weekend." He also added that by hearing them has "allowed me to become more sensitive to the needs of others." It's not often that music can be so emotionally moving and soul enriching like that of Sexy Death Soda's. Hurry now to record store to get a copy of Sexy Death Soda's California Police State out on Bonglous Records.
Mastomenia

What is Mastomenia? It's hard to find the words to describe what Mastomenia is or does. It's defined better heard than seen. Where can you find Mastomenia? Mastomenia is out there but only a few have experienced it. Mastomenia is the sound of the future that never was, where Prince embraces the sounds of 80's new wave synthesizers and claims the world of pop music. It's where those fantasies you don't like to talk about are lived out through music. Mastomenia lets you feel good about being the sensual animal that you are deep down inside. The hard thing though is to find your way to Mastomenia but with the help of a man named Glen Scarmelot you can find what you are looking for. Write to him at 450A Foothill Blvd, Oakland, CA 94606 and you will be changed forever.

Poems and other nonsense by Spencer

Nip Nip 'Rip
Nip Nip 'Rip
Nip Nip Ouch

When I see a pair of legs
It makes me cry,
But only when they're kicking me in the face.
People who lie in wood

houses
Don't throw termites
It's tough to see what's going on
When your emotions are
In the way.
Oh, that's just a fat guy
sitting in front of me.

Sometimes I eat alone
Because my food is antisocial.

I shot him with my gun
And he said ouch.
So I said I was sorry,
but I guess people
don't hear well
After you shoot them.

Right on the Money

Many know him as "the fourth Beastie Boy," but not too many know much more than that about Mark Ramos Nas—a otherwise known as Money Mark. With his amazing work with the Beastie Boys going by unnoticed most of the time. Mark got his first chance to shine in 1995 when he put out his first solo album Keyboard Repair on Mo' Wax. Filled primarily with keyboard dominated instrumentals Keyboard Repair was one of the best unnoticed albums of the year. There were even a few songs like "Cry" that showcased Mark's singing abilities as well. In '96 Mark took his astounding one man show on the road with Beck and left fans wanting more. Since then he has found himself splitting time between his own material and working with the Beastie Boys on their new album. In May, Mark is due to release his newest album called Push the Button on Mo' Wax/FRRR. Unlike Keyboard Repair, Push the Button does not revolve around instrumentals. Mark evidently has decided to try his hand at full pop songs. This time around songs not only have keyboards, but guitars, drums and more. Push the Button is quite a departure from what Mark has done previously; but at the same time it may be his best work yet. To compare and contrast with what he's doing now to what he was just listen to the new re-recorded version of the song "Hank in Your Head." Throughout the rest of the album Mark shows his more mature sound and adventurous style, like on the hyperactive "Power House." With Push the Button Mark should finally get some of the overdue credit he has earned and become recognized as more than that guy that plays with the Beastie Boys.

nied couples, however, most couples are not living with the HIV virus. Things began to progress and look up for us. We were finally becoming the process of becoming a true family unit."

Senior year of high school. Prospects of going to Brown University filled her life long dream. At the end of March, during a routine check up, they discover Andrea has full blown AIDS and her prognosis is not well. Meanwhile, Alfonso's health was also deteriorating and his state of mind was dwindling.

"Because of the flow of negativity in my house, I began to question life and believe our days here on Earth were truly coming to a closure."

December 2, 1995. Her biggest fears became a reality when her husband dies from complications from having the virus. "Two days later, trying to put my life together again and keep my mind free of things as well as keeping some what of a normal environment for my daughter who was extremely ill at the time, I was encouraged to attend Johnson & Wales and study Business Management. I entered Johnson & Wales University where I would be studying for my PhD. Also, I wanted to eliminate the stress and controversy I know would surround an HIV person studying to be a medical doctor.

Being a freshman here at JWU, or any other university for that matter, I was trying to fit in and deal with the stress of being a freshman in general, but also dealing with my situation at home. I'm not even 20 years of age at this point. I have always been open about my HIV status and have nothing to hide or be ashamed of. So after some thought, I decided, as an outlet for me, I would begin to speak in various classrooms about my life experiences being a young female living with the HIV virus.

I realized I was taking a huge gamble with coming out about my HIV status and was anticipating both positive and negative feedback.

Overall, surprised by the overwhelming overflow of negativity, however, I questioned whether I had made the right choice about coming out.

Knowing myself and knowing I was a fighter and survivor, I continued to persevere and make myself heard and recognized by people that I admire and I was not going away quietly.

This theory about negativity soon began to be questioned because a group of ignorant individuals began petitioning to have me kicked out of school and make my life a living hell, more so than what I was already experiencing.

I believed that I did nothing wrong which enabled me to confront their insecurities and relieved them of their doubts. Seeing this, consequently, other individuals banded together and gave their support empowering me to continue on my crusade.

JWU has been a trial but as I look back I can only say I wouldn't

 Raquel will be graduating this year from JWU.

A side note: Raquel and I (Gina) met in class through a mutual friend, David and subsequently director of East Hall. I consider myself blessed that I can consider her to be a good friend. Even through her difficult time, she has remained a pillar of strength and a role model to all she surrounds. I commend her admission and willingness to persevere in her life's most difficult time and continue to stay on top. I wish her all the best in all her future endeavors. I hope each and every dream she has comes true and continues to be a striving force. God Bless. Love, G.
The members of Pan-Hel would like to wish the Class of 1998 good luck in the future! We would also like to wish everyone good luck with final exams!

U.S. Must Maintain Lead in Humor

A recent discovery could be the end of civilization as we know it, the end of humor as we know it.

Scientists have discovered the brain's funny bone.

The result? She laughed hysterically. Everything was funny.

According to The New York Times, the electric shocks caused her to perceive "genuine humor" in "mundane surroundings."

At one point, she even said, "You guys are just so funny"—standing around.

Yeah, a real laugh riot.

Think what this means.

With this technology, networks will be able to make us think anything's funny—even "Veronica's Closet."

Comedy nightclubs won't have to hire comedians anymore. Uncle Billy will read right out of the phone book ("Oh no! Not another John Smith! Stop it! You're killing me!")—the waitress will talk about her toenail fungus and Aunt Mildred will show slides of her Tupperware collection.

And the audience will love it.

Worst of all, newspapers won't have to run humor columns anymore. People will crack up reading the soybean reports.

No big deal, you say?

Say you're a lawyer. How would you feel if they invented a device that charges billable hours?

Or a bureaucrat and they invented a machine that shuffles papers?

Not so funny, is it?

But this isn't only about me, it's about our country.

The United States has always taken the lead in humor development. How will we maintain that lead if we succumb to the sirensong of easy electro-laughs?

Other countries said a practical buzzer could never be built. We went ahead and did it.

Other countries merely dreamed about realistic plastic vomit. Only the U.S. of A. had the know-how to get it done.

And in the late '60s, it was the U.S. that perfected the zero-gravity whoopee cushion and took it to the moon!

The point is, science shouldn't be messing with something that could affect our nation's humor productivity.

Instead, scientists should concentrate on what they do best—making lurid predictions of impending doom, such as the recent Great Asteroid Scare of '98.

Imagine the excitement of more news bulletins like the following: "Speaking today from the Waldorf-Hysteria in New York City, scientists announced that the sun will super-nova tomorrow afternoon during the Oprah show. With temperatures expected to be over 100,000 degrees Fahrenheit, scientists are recommending sunscreen with an SPF of 32 or more."

That would get people talking about science, even if the next day scientists have to announce that it was all a miscalculation.

And if scientists promise to stay away from humor, I'll stay away from science.

Seek and You May Find

Through the ages, great minds have pondered this question: is it better to take the first available spot you find at the shopping mall or do you continue searching for a space right up front?

The ancient Greeks thought it was better to search for a spot near the entrance, but since there weren't any cars back then, finding a good spot was easy.

Much later, Isaac Newton wrestled with the problem, but he finally decided a definitive answer would have to wait until both cars and shopping malls had been invented. In frustration, he turned his attention to the question of why apple trees continued peeling him with fruit.

But recently I heard about a study conducted by a professor from Virginia Tech.

Here are his astounding conclusions: (1) If you don't mind walking, it's easier to take the first available spot, and (2) if you don't mind searching a while, you can probably find a space closer to the entrance.

Finally, the question of the ages has been solved!

There used to be a PBS show—"The Day the Universe Changed"—that was about extraordinary breakthroughs like the printing press and the Wonderbra. I'm hoping they can bring the show back for a special on the eh parking lot study.

Something else I found interesting was that the researcher said he liked to park quickly while his wife preferred holding out for a better spot.

It's the same in my family. I can't stand looking for more than three seconds, but my wife always wants to hunt for a place near the entrance.

This seems to be a reversal of the traditional man-as-hunter role, which I fulfill at home by hunting for better TV shows with my remote control.

But I don't have the temperament for parking space hunting.

Generally, I consider myself to be a patient man, but when it comes to searching for a parking space I have the patience of a caffeine-crazed fea suffering from Attention Deficit Disorder.

I get so agitated I turn around and bark, "If I have to pull over, you're going to be spanked!"

This is particularly embarrassing if I'm by myself.

People complain about the awful price—20 to 50 bucks—of parking in the city. I'm lucky they don't charge more.

If I were looking for more than two minutes, I'd happily pull into a place that advertised: "Turn over deed to house and park FREE for two hours!"

The reason is that paying any price is better than hearing the most dreaded words in the English language; I think you missed a spot back there."

As even the ancient Greeks knew, there's no way that spot will still be there once you drive around the block.

Chef Linda Wadensten takes the fear out of cooking. She believes if you know the basic techniques, you can understand any recipe. Unfortunately, many people lack that basic knowledge, and she has set out to correct that problem with her new cookbook, Hooiffinfathers.

Hooiffinfathers is a collection of recipes that Chef Linda, as she is called, has gathered since childhood. Chef Linda was only eight years old when she made breakfast in bed for her family. "Crepes were the first thing I ever cooked," she recalls. "And from that one basic recipe, I learned to make pancakes, waffles, muffins and cakes."

She also learned how to make seven different meals with ground beef – meatloaf, stuffed peppers, spaghetti and meatballs, Swedish meatballs, lasagna, enchiladas and chili. And then she learned how to turn a sauteed chicken dish into a rainbow of recipes - chicken scampi, sun-dried tomato chicken, chicken cashew, gorgonzola chicken, chicken in vinegar sauce, chicken Marsala, chicken piccata, hot and spicy chicken, mango margarita chicken and braised chicken.

"That's what my book is all about – recipes that call for simple ingredients and that take 30 minutes or less to make," Chef Linda said. "My real goal with Hooiffinfathers is for it to be a cookbook the whole family can use every day. I think it's very important that children learn to cook. Those are my fondest memories, the quality time I spent learning to cook with my Swedish grandmother. People today forget about the simple things in life."

Chef Linda is a graduate of JWU's College of Culinary Arts. She was the chef-owner of the Seahorse Grill, a popular restaurant in Matunuck, RI for seven years before she took a stab at writing a cookbook. She is now on a national book tour.

Here are five recipes from Hooiffinfathers with one common denominator: apples. They are sure to bring your family back to the dinner table. (From Hooiffinfathers by Linda Wadensten, PO. Box 905, Charlestown, RI 02813, 222 pages, $28.95)

Kahlua Dip (makes 2 cups)
8 ounces cream cheese (preferably Tempture brand), softened
1/4 cup Kahlua liqueur
2 tablespoons evaporated milk
1 tablespoon sugar
3 tablespoons sliced almonds

Mix all the ingredients together until smooth. Serve with sliced apples, pineapples and strawberries.

Chicken Cashew
1 (8-ounce) boneless skinless chicken breasts, trimmed, cut into half
1 cup flour
4 tablespoons butter
1 cup cashews
20 seedless grapes
1 cup diced Granny Smith apples
1/2 cup Frangelico liqueur

Fry the chicken until thin. Degrease with the flour; discard any excess flour. Heat the butter in a saute pan over high heat. Add chicken and the remaining ingredients except the liqueur. Cook for 2 minutes. Remove from the heat. Add the liqueur and return to the heat. (Be careful; the liqueur may ignite but the flame will die when the alcohol is burned off.) Cook for 2 minutes or until the chicken is cooked through, shaking the pan from side to side constantly. Serve immediately.

Grilled Swordfish Fillets with Apple Salsa
4 swordfish fillets, 1 inch thick
4 tablespoons mayonnaise or olive oil

This can be done either on a hot grill outdoors or in the oven on broil. Brush the fillet with the mayonnaise to keep it from sticking to the grill, if you're broiling, just spray a little nonstick cooking spray on to the pan. Cook for about 3 minutes per side or until the fish is firm to the touch and/or tender. Serve with apple salsa (recipe follows).

Apple Salsa
(makes 2 cups)
2 tablespoons finely diced white onion
1 cup finely diced apple
1 (4.5-ounce) can chopped green chilies
1/2 cup finely diced mango
1 clove garlic
2 tablespoons minced fresh cilantro
1 tablespoon tequila
Juice of 1/2 fresh lemon
Juice of 1/2 fresh lime

Mix all ingredients in bowl and refrigerate.

Apple Florentine Pie
(serves 6-8)
1 ready-made pie crust
2 cups sliced mushrooms
2 cloves garlic
1/2 chopped white onion
1/2 cups chopped spinach (frozen, thawed)
1/2 cups ricotta cheese
4 tablespoons Parmesan cheese
1/2 teaspoon oregano

Preheat oven to 400 degrees. In a bowl, combine the spinach, onions, cheese and herbs. Roll out the crust, place in a pie plate, fill with the spinach mixture and top with the basil. Bake at 400 degrees until golden brown.

JWU's First Championship Shutout
Men's Baseball Defeats Endicott 11-0

They did it. They finally did it. It's been a baseball season filled with expectations, ups and downs, and day after day of hard work. But ask each player on the JWU baseball team. They'll tell you it was worth it.

The Wildcats stormed back from a disappointing doubleheader loss to Endicott that cost J-Dub a regular season pennant in a big, big way. JWU unceremoniously dumped Endicott in the Great Northeast Athletic Conference championship game, 11-0. The win gave the Wildcats their first-ever GNAC baseball title, and unseated the Poser Gulls, who had won 19 consecutive conference games, dating back to the playoffs of 1996.

Steve Quattrocchi, one of five seniors, pitched an absolute masterpiece. The righthander from Poughkeepsie, NY twirled a four-hit complete game shutout, with 12 strikeouts.

Meanwhile, junior first baseman Tom Borgia was simply on fire as he led the JWU offense throughout the tournament. After reaching base five straight times in Johnson & Wales’ 11-2 victory over Albertus Magnus in the semifinals, Borgia had four hits and four RBI. He reached base 11 of his 12 hits to the plate in the tournament. For all that, Borgia was named the GNAC tournament’s Most Valuable Player. Ross Wilmut, who put Albertus Magnus to sleep with three huge hits and four RBI in the semifinal, was named to the All-Tournament team with Quattrocchi and Rob Ecleston, who had been brilliant all year for the Cats. But there was much, much more.

Alberto Gonzalez also had four hits while Mark Deveaux had three. The offense that head coach Dave Morris had been hoping for went right at Endicott ace Nate Burnett, who had beaten the Wildcats just last week.

JWU opened the scoring in the first, when Deveaux singled, stole second, and scored on a Gonzalez single. Borgia followed with his first RBI to make it 2-0. The Cats added a run in the second when Dave DeSanty, JWU’s human target, was struck by a pitched ball for the 15th time this season and scored on a Deveaux single to right.

The lead blossomed to 5-0 in the fourth as Gonzalez and Borgia again laced back-to-back hits. And the advantage swelled to 8-2 zip in the fifth when Jan Michael Giglio teamed with Gonzalez for another pair of runs.

Wilmut, Ecleston, DeSanty, Quattrocchi, and Foster leave Coach Morris and Assistant Coach Steve McCuminisky with a gift indicative of the phenomenal growth of the base- ball program under their tutelage...
Moving day is fast approaching

Are you ready?
Post Offices have a MOVER’S GUIDE to help you on your move back home, off campus, or wherever else your destiny takes you. The following are excerpts from the guide.

A checklist:
- Take inventory. Decide what to keep, give away, donate or sell. Start packing belongings that you don’t use often.
- Make travel plans. If your moving home, home—include airline, train, bus reservations, or start mapping out a route if driving.
- Fill out the Change of Address Form 30 days prior to your move! The form is available in the Guide.
- Arrange to have utilities stopped at your old address and started at your new place.
- Contact the phone company, heat/electric, and cable.
- Pack a survival kit. (See below)
- Confirm any travel plans or reservations.
- Finish packing and make sure all boxes are appropriately labeled.
- As college students, usually, you are right now, cramming all your stuff in any boxes you can find. Finish packing.
- Walk through your place to make sure everything is accounted for.
- Eat something, stretch a little, and start those muscles for a workout.

What’s in your survival kit?
- Keys and directions
- Payment to landlord/lady if not yet done
- Basic tools: hammer, screwdriver, nails, masking tape, tape measure, flashlight, light bulbs, pocket knife, trash bags
- Bathroom needs: a towel, soap, and toilet paper
- Kitchen needs: paper towels, sponges, cleansers, water and a snack, special foods, paper plates, cups, and plastic utensils.
- Other items: eyeglasses, prescription drugs, address book, checkbook, telephone, clock, change of clothes, and money.

Packing Up
What to Pack
- Only pack items that you have space for an have used within the past year.
- It’s best not to move canned foods (they’re heavy), perishable foods (they’ll spoil), old magazines or flammable materials.

Try recycling things you’re not taking:
- sell them to other students in desperate need of cheap furniture, clothes, books, etc. . .
- give them to friends who are in desperate need of free furniture, clothes, books, etc.
- leave the stuff on the sidewalk with a “FREE” sign. (That’s bound to be taken within a half hour).

How to Pack
There are many places to get free or inexpensive boxes:
- grocery stores, liquor stores, or large discount stores
- your workplace
- neighbors and friends
- truck rental companies that will stow boxes, new and used

If you need packing material, try these common items:
- liners and tape
- newspapers, blank newsmagazine, tissues paper, “recycling” paper, or the old yellow pages.
- bubble wrap or plastic and paper bags

Remember to:
- reinforce the bottoms of the boxes with tape
- put heavy items in small boxes, lighter items in large boxes
- wrap fragile items individually and pack with padding in between
- tape plastic bags with the hardware for furniture or tamps to each item
- don’t load boxes until they’re too heavy to carry
- mark each box clearly

Unpack
Before unpacking, sweep the floors, dust, wipe the drawers, etc.
Then:
1) Unpack your bedding and make up the beds
2) Unpack bathrooms, essentials
3) Clean an area of the kitchen for cooking essentials
4) If you have an extra room, keep nonessential boxes there.

Keep a room free of boxes and clutter as a “move-free” sanctuary to relax in at the end of the day.

Things to do in your new neighborhood
Go for a drive, walk, or bike ride to learn your way around and meet new neighbors.
