“Love Bug” Attacks Computers Worldwide

Mike Post
editor-in-chief

Wednesday, May 3 began like any other Wednesday before it. People rose and went to work expecting a day as normal as any other. They went about their daily tasks, returning messages, sending faxes and reading their email. Unfortunately that would also be the day that a message titled ‘I love you’ appeared. This “I Love You” contained a computer virus that would slowly eat at your computer’s memory and hard drive.

The virus originated in the Philippines. As it traveled rapidly across the globe it continued to infect large corporations systems. Corporations, which rely on email and other Internet tools to conduct business were rendered useless. As the virus hit southern New England, companies began the daunting task of removing the tainted email and the shut down of their Internet servers.

At the University, email was shut down around 9am and at 1pm the entire University system was removed from the Internet as a proactive move. Since the start of the virus the University has cleared all computer lab’s of the virus and recommends that students update their virus software on their computers.

How does the ‘I Love You’ virus work? ‘I Love You’, appears as an email attachment apparently sent by a friend or coworker. Once a victim is tricked into opening the email, the virus than searches and looks for Microsoft Outlook and only works under the Windows operating system. Once in the computer the virus attaches itself to every .jpeg image file or .mp3 file stored on your computer and deletes them. Before deleting the images the virus emails itself to every person or destination in the victims various address books, including any corporations distribution lists. The virus will also change the Internet startup page on the computer. The pages are directed to Skyinternet were the victims computer is instructed to download a password-stealing program.

The ‘I Love You’ epidemic is slowly winding down, but now there are other more severe mutations of the virus spreading. Email with the subject line of Fw: Joke, and Very funny may also contain the virus. Most recently the email with the subject line "Mothers Day Order Confirmation" can be destructive enough to prevent you from ever restarting your computer again.

There are some sites on the Internet to receive more help and information. They are: ZDNet I Love You Virus Center & McAfee.com Anti-Virus. Experts say to keep a cautious eye and watch who you receive email from.

Hazing: Is there need for change in the new millennium?

Kelly Price

"Editors Note: this speech was presented to the Johnson & Wales Greek Community as part of Greek Week 2000. The speech was given on Wed., April 26 in the Pepsi Forum of Plantations Hall.

This isn’t easy for me...hazing is a subject that was hard for me, and many others to confront. I have seen it everyday in my life. Is it a problem, or much ado about nothing? HAZING IS A PROBLEM. Not only is physical abuse playing a role in the damage and destruction in our society. But, hazing is also making members of the community emotionally unstable and in some cases, mentally insane. I don’t know if I would have behaved all this, unless I saw it for myself...just like drinking and driving - I never thought I would get caught or get into an accident, until I got two DWI’s in ten days. I almost killed my best friend coming home from the clubs in Albany. Worst of all, I could have crossed the double lines, and killed a family of five.

Why is the issue of hazing so bothersome to me? Why do I care so much? To tell the truth I never knew hazing existed in fraternities and sororities until I spoke to my brother.

I have never forgotten the day I unpacked his stuff with him at Umass. Who knew two weeks later everything he had worked for, and earned would be taken away.

My brother, Michael Jason is a brother in Theta Chi at Umass. He used to be my role model. USED TO BE: we had the same friends, same taste in music, same hobbies, interests and future goals. He was going to Umass for turf grass management and I was going to Cornell’s school of hotel/restaurant management. Therefore, we could take over the family business, I’d run the inside and he’d run the outside. Inseparable...they were realistic goals. My parents own a country club and we have been around it all our lives. We always had said we didn’t want anything to do with the business but as we got older - we knew we would do it together.

Kelly & Michael Jason Price pose at Kelly’s Graduation. Michael was a victim of Hazing at Umass.

Thank you Theta Chi for raining on my parade. Yeah, if you never knew my brother before he pledged you would think he was a great guy. Just give him a little while to open up and he’s still a great guy - he’s just really weird.

Our best friends and I were talking the other day. Talking about however since he left for college he’s been ‘out there’. We talked about how we have learned to love and respect him for whom he is, and how we are anticipating what he might become in the future.

But it wasn’t always like that. Up until about a year and a half ago - we considered him a freak show. He would translate the Bible, wow, I never learned anything like this in Sunday school. He would become violent if you accidentally burned him with a cigarette, once I spit in his face (but I landed on his arm) and he punched me so hard in the chest that I thought he broke something. This was not the Jason I hugged for hours in the fall of ’96.

So, I’m a legacy - I’ve always been interested in Greek Life. Like I said before, I thought the hazing was all fun and games. It wasn’t until I had decided I was going to RUSH, that I learned otherwise.

When I told my brother... I saw the fear in his eyes. I didn’t put the trembling in his voice together with his karma of fear until I got on the Internet and typed “sororities”.

At first I thought he was jealous. What did he mean when he said, “I was too good for a sorority?” What did he mean when he said, “Kelly, there is no doubt in my mind that you could handle it, but why would you want to?” Surprise, once on the net, there was more information on hazing than the actual organizations.

The more I read, the more I thought about what my brother had said. But it wasn’t what he said; it was how he said it.

I believe in fate and freewill. I believe everything is set to happen, it’s whether or not you do anything to change it. I was sick during Rush week, maybe it would have been a great experience. Maybe I would have gotten through it. Or maybe I’d be worse off than my brother. But what can be worse than being legally insane?

You have heard horror stories about fraternity hazing? I’ve read hundreds of case studies not just on the physical but on the emotional distress of members who have experienced hazing. I’ve read laws that have been won, and charters that have been lost.

Well, I’m not sure how they affect you, but every time I hear another story, my chest locks up. Through high school I thought these stories were amusing. But it’s not amusing when my brother has a nervous breakdown hiding in the woods from the police. It’s not amusing when my brother thinks god talks to him in the shower. It’s not amusing when my down-to-earth brother hates everyone around him.

Do you think this would have happened to him if he never pledged?

Making Sense of a Tragedy

Nathan Beaudin
Phi Kappa Sigma

There have been many things throughout my lifetime that I have considered being difficult tasks. Looking back on these things now, they seem insignificant and petty compared to what I have been asked to do. It is not easy to look inside of yourself and express your true feelings for the whole world to read. The reason that I have agreed to do so, is because I know that Chris would have done the same for me.

I was at work on Tuesday afternoon when I got the phone call that would shatter my sense of reality. It was my roommate Chris Baker, and I knew right away that something was wrong. He was crying and I had never seen that before from him. "I'm coming to get you right now, Hayes is dead..." He repeated the words while sobbing, and I felt my entire body go numb. I have never experienced a close friend dying before, and it is unlike anything that I have ever felt in my life. There are no words that can even remotely describe it.

I returned home to find the house already filled with people. As many as people there were, it was painfully quiet. Words were not needed to be spoken; the overwhelming grief was etched on each person's face. Chris was an amazing person who had touched so many people's lives throughout his own. It seemed like it was all a bad dream and I would wake up in my bed at any moment. Sadly, I knew in my heart that this was a reality I would have to deal with.

A group of us decided to go over to Chris's apartment, because his mother and stepfather were already in town from Connecticut. I distinctly remember having those late night talks with Hayes about how cool his mother was, and how much he loved her. I was not expecting the woman that I met that day. Chris's mom, Jackie Toussaint, is perhaps the strongest and most caring person that I have ever met in my life. Without her strength that day, I'm not quite sure what would have happened to a lot of us.

The full impact of reality didn't quite hit me until we actually got to Chris's apartment. Seeing his dog in the yard was when I first lost my composure. Chris and his dog Toby had been inseparable. For as long as I had known Hayes, he had treated the dog like it was his own child. Seeing Toby at that point just brought tears to my eyes for the first time. I realized that it was going to be much harder than I ever thought that it would be.

We got inside, and I finally had the opportunity to meet Chris' mom after hearing about her for the last three years. I truly wish that it had been under different circumstances. I can honestly say that Chris had not been exaggerating one bit when describing his mother. She and his stepfather were so strong, and we all wept openly in front of them. It was when I saw a box on the couch, and Chris' mom putting his clothes in it that I really broke down. Looking back now, I realize that was when I knew that he was really gone and he wasn't coming back. At that point, I got nauseous and I threw up for the first time that day.

Elizabeth Glaser Pediatric AIDS Foundation Launches Campus Education Program at J&W

courtesy of the Elizabeth Glaser Pediatric AIDS Foundation

The Elizabeth Glaser Pediatric AIDS Foundation, partnering with Johnson & Wales University, kicks off its new education and awareness program: "Caring for Kids 101" with a "Million Penny Drive." Developed to engage college students and encourage philanthropic efforts, "Caring for Kids 101" will promote community involvement, educate students on HIV/AIDS-related issues and foster the belief that each student can make a difference in their communities to help children with HIV/AIDS and other serious and life-threatening diseases.

Beginning April 1, 12 colleges and universities across the United States will host fundraising events with proceeds benefitting the Elizabeth Glaser Pediatric AIDS foundation to help do more for more children around the world. The "Million Penny Drive," sponsored by the Greek System at Johnson & Wales University will be one of the first "Caring for Kids 101" events to take place. The students have challenged the faculty, staff, and administration to raise 500,000 pennies matching their own effort.

"We applaud the initiative of these young people in helping to raise awareness of the global pandemic that is HIV/AIDS," said Paul Glaser, chairman of the board of the Elizabeth Glaser Pediatric AIDS Foundation. "Each day, 1,800 children worldwide are newly infected with HIV/AIDS. In the United States alone, two adolescents are infected every hour. College students represent our future ensuring that we will leave the world a better place.

"Caring for Kids 101" educates college students about the impact of AIDS while empowering them to bring hope to children with HIV/AIDS and other serious and life-threatening diseases," said actor Scott Wolf, star of the FOX network hit "Party of Five." "Participating in these campus events is a meaningful and valuable way to give back to the community through service and commitment." Wolf, along with actress Brooke Shields, will serve as co-chairs of the campaign. Actresses Ashley Judd, Tia and Tamera Mowry will serve as national spokespeople.

Other colleges and Greek Systems hosting events in April include Adrian College; University of California, Berkeley; Indiana University of Pennsylvania; IUP; Bowling Green University; University of Iowa; University of Kentucky; Loyola University of New Orleans; Rockhurst University; University of Texas at Austin and Carnegie Mellon University.

"To some, the Greek system may seem like a purely social endeavor, but my experience in that community gave me the opportunities that exist," said actress Ashley Judd. "Participating in "Caring for Kids 101" gives me the chance to encourage members of the Greek system at Johnson & Wales to play a part in helping improve the lives of children with HIV/AIDS and other serious and life-threatening diseases."

Elizabeth Glaser, infected with HIV through a blood transfusion after giving birth, unknowingly transmitted the AIDS virus to her daughter Ariel and son Jake. Devastated by Ariel's 1988 death, Elizabeth joined friends Susie Zeegam and Susan Delauter to create a foundation to support pediatric HIV/AIDS research. Elizabeth died of HIV complications in 1994. The Elizabeth Glaser Pediatric AIDS Foundation has established a solid community of medical scientists helping to reduce the rate of mother-to-child HIV transmission, discover preventative treatments and develop an effective vaccine. In March the foundation launched the Glaser Pediatric Research Network, an innovative and collaborative partnership linking world-class scientific centers to accelerate progress on serious and life-threatening pediatric illness.

"Caring for Kids 101 provides an opportunity to learn about the deep rewards of community service and philanthropy for the students at Johnson & Wales University who are participating in the "Million Penny Drive." -Brooke Shields

"Hazing: Is there a need for change?"

Some people deny that hazing causes mental distress, "He could have dropped" they say. But he was eighteen, he was too stupid to, he listened to his brothers, he was brainwashed, we went through it, this teaches you respect, there is a purpose. Well, now he resents what he went through and resents the fact that each class after him didn't do half of the stuff he did.

Do you feel the pain in my heart? Do you know how bad it hurts when I hear that he participated in pledge drops? An activity that is like hide-n-seek. In his fraternity the pledges would hide and when they were found they were beaten senseless. Do you think that during this activity he thought he would ever have a flashback?

What has going on in his mind that cold January night he got arrested? Do you have tears in your eyes? I do, and I saw a tear run down his face as he said his dropoffs weren't that bad.
The things he let his brothers (not the fraternity) do to him, was degrading and pointless.

Do you think he cared, back then? Anything to gain the respect of your brothers? Do you think he cares now? His brothers should be ashamed of himself.
The torture he underwent, the pain he suffered, he confusion about himself, these are some of the things his brothers caused him. They made him the way he is. Where do you think he thought 'the god talking to him' in the shower came from? He said that if god thought he was wrong he would burn him with hot water. The first time we put him in a mental institution, was when God told him his ex-girlfriend had given him AIDS. Did my brother have AIDS? No.

Well, Theta Chi, I'm sorry, nobody said my brother was perfect. Thank you Theta Chi for ruining his self esteem, thank you for the violence you instilled in his mind, thank you for the trust he lost in society. Thank you for taking my brother away.

Through all of this, I give my condolences to more than 70 families that have lost their brother, sister, son or daughter to fraternity hazing. Especially to the 3 families this year.

Although I often refer to my brother as better off dead, my family and I are fortunate that he is still with us today.

Some say being hated is about being strong. Some have said that my brother wasn't strong enough.

They didn't know my brother. My brother's heart was filled with love and laughter, hopes and dreams...my inspiration. His heart is still filled with love and laughter...hopes and dreams and he is still my inspiration.

Maybe he is yours too. "Break the tradition not the law."

CROPDUSTER, CROPDUSTER

Sarah Groth
Contributor

So the other day, I was driving down 195 when my car started making funny noises. I pulled off and, with the last sputter my engine ever made, I rode into the frontier town of PostPunk. The sun was beating down on my baseball hat and, being the vodka-based organism that I am, my feet carried me into the closest bar I could find: a honky-tonk on the outskirts of town. It was there I found Cropduster.

Actually, my friend Jose just brought the CD to my house, but now you have a little idea of what Cropduster is all about. The foursome from Hackensack kick off their disc with “Trevor Trailer Trash” and the following twenty-seven minutes fulfill this opener’s promise of lusty rock, light songs and disillusioned-flavor lyrics. In “Token Country Song/Poet Punk Era Depression,” Cropduster break themselves down into their component parts then put it all back together for the pop-tinged “Point the Finger” which only briefly digresses into aural assault.

The 8-song work is filled out with the luscious, Quaalude-inflected “Animal Crackers,” the Saturday afternoon-paced pleasure of “Buzzard of Doom” and the flawed triplet composed of “Never,” “Rocks”

How Doth the Summer Faire Thee?

courtesy of Trinity Repertory

For the past two summers, Trinity Summer Shakespeare Project has entertained audiences all over Southern New England with its pared-down, fast-paced, extremely accessible, and incredibly fun productions of Shakespeare’s greatest plays. This summer the lively troupe returns for its third season with two brand new productions that are sure to delight: The Taming of the Shrew and Julius Caesar.

The season runs from June through August, with performances at various outdoor venues in Rhode Island, Massachusetts, and New York.

Julius Caesar will be directed by returning Summer Shakespeare director Eric Tucker, who delighted audiences with last season’s productions of Twelfth Night and Romeo and Juliet. Amanda Dehnert, Trinity Rep’s associate artistic director, will direct The Taming of the Shrew.

Julius Caesar, Shakespeare’s grand political drama, resonates with intrigue for today’s audiences. The rise and demise of a great political figure through the crafty proclamations of his friends highlights a conspiracy of monumental proportions. Trinity Summer Shakespeare Project will astound you with their energy and zeal as they revitalize this riveting classic.

Shakespeare’s Taming of the Shrew is a lively look at the battle of the sexes. Kate’s a girl with a reputation. Her strong will, sharp tongue, and fiery temper have frightened off many would-be suitors. Meanwhile, her father Baptista won’t let anyone court her younger sister Bianca until Kate is married. Attracted by her large dowry, Petruchio marries Kate, completing Shakespeare’s most humorously incompatable couple. Who wins this outrageous clash of domestic sensibilities? Don’t miss Trinity’s summer take on this timeless bit of fun and love.

"I am only one person who was asked to write about Chris, but I know that I am speaking for everybody in what I say."

remind me of Chris, and I see them on daily basis. I can still see him playing football on Friday night, and I remember each and every summer night that the gang spent together at the drive-in movie theater. We would go swimming in the pool to just shooting the bull, there have been so many quality moments that we have all spent together. I know that I'll always have these memories, and nobody can ever take those away from me.

Looking back now, there were so many things that Hayes used to do that would get me angry at the time. No matter how he did it, I would always be mad at him for more than a couple of minutes. You would just realize that it was Hayes, and he was who he was. He was perhaps the most genuine and honest person that I have ever met. There wasn't one ounce of bull when it came to Chris. He was never out to impress anybody with his actions. He would tell them how it becoming harder and harder to stop writing. There are so many things that I could say about Hayes that I might end up going on forever. I've had to stop a couple of times while writing, because I couldn't see the keyboard through my tears. In the end, I think that getting all of my feelings out onto paper really helped me out. It's not good to keep your emotions bottled up inside, because it will only tear you up even more. Let people know how you feel about them, and don't be afraid to let your true feelings out to those you are close to. I consider myself to be lucky, because I had that opportunity over twenty years that Hayes. I'm positive that he knows how much that he meant to me, and I know that he cared for me as a true friend. I realize that there are so many things that are going to be difficult to do again after the accident. There are so many things in my life that specifically you exactly what was on his mind, and that was that.

I can think of a perfect example of something that Hayes used to do to just try to get me going. About two months ago, I woke up one morning after a night out with the guys. I got up to get a glass of water and that is when I noticed the black mark on my bedroom wall in big letters was "I love Chris Hayes." At first I was really mad, and I wanted to call Hayes and yell at him for what he had done. I thought about it for a couple of minutes, and then I laughed to myself. Classic Hayes, I thought. He was going to make me wash it off, but I never got around to asking him. I'm kind of glad that I didn't, because it's still there on my wall and I see it every morning when I wake up. I guess it's a permanent reminder of Hayes, which is comforting. I guess there is another reason that I am taking this tragedy so close to the heart. The night of the accident, I talked to Chris about two hours before it happened. One of my Brothers Fred and I were going to go with Hayes and Rick, but decided not to go at the end. It's strange the way that fate works sometimes.

In all, I think that it is easy to say that Chris touched many people's lives in the short amount of time that he was here on Earth. The funeral and wake should be a testament to that. People are flying in all over the country to see Chris layed to rest. I think that the healing process won't truly begin until after the funeral. Then everybody will be able to look back on the times they personally had with Chris, and appreciate every moment they shared together. I just want to end this by saying that I will personally never forget Christopher William Hayes for as long as I live. If they need one of their close friends to pass away I can honestly say that I am a better person for knowing him. I hope that he is in a better place now, and will never feel pain again. I love him with all my heart, and look forward to seeing him on the other side. But then again, he already knows that.

The brothers of Phi Kappa Sigma would like to thank all of the people and organizations that took time out of their day and effort to give us their condolences for the passing of our fraternity brother Chris Hayes. Thank You: Theta Phi Alpha, Phi Sigma Sigma, Sigma Delta Tau, Delta Phi Epsilon, Sigma Sigma Sigma, Sigma Pi, Zeta Beta Tau, Tau Kappa Epsilon, Delta Sigma Phi and Pi. Mens Tennis Wins Second Straight GNAC Title

sports editor

The second time around proved much tougher than the first, but Johnson & Wales still reigns supreme in the Great Northeast Athletic Conference's world of men's tennis.

Last year, with a veteran cast that featured all-time wins leader Ahmed Hassan, the Wildcats breezed through the GNAC and won 11-0 on their way to the conference title.

Now, it's bad enough that Hassan and compatriots Peter Kornumper and Daniel Sigroen and company graduated, but, when they went to Northfield, Vermont, to defend their title last week, the new Wildcats tennis team was also hampered by injuries.

Number-one singles player Jordan Payner had been bothered by a nagging ankle injury, and undefeated Nick Daugherty's season was stopped with a week to play because of a knee problem.

But two veterans stepped up, and Coach Alan Freedman's Wildcats remained winners and still champions. Rob Pleva and Nick Hamrlik came up very large. Each won their singles match before they teamed up for the deciding point at third-doubles as the Wildcats beat Western New England in the GNAC championship match, 5-4.

"It was maybe the most closely contested match we've ever had," said Freedman, whose record over the last two years with the men's team is a gaudy 23-1. "Rob and Nick were great.

Pleva, a junior, bounced right back from his loss in the semifinal round against Suffolk and beat WNEC's number one player, Brian Hanson, 6-0, 6-4. "It was Rob's biggest win in three years," said Freedman. "He just wouldn't be denied.

Payner, hobbled by the injury and placed at number-two, gamely fought the Golden Bears' Mike Raymond, but the WNEC standout pulled his team even with a 6-3, 6-3 win.

While the results of the top two matches canceled each other out, freshman Greg Powell breezed past his opponent. And Hamrlik, playing for only the fourth time all year in singles match, came up with a straight-set, 6-3, 6-2 win to give the Cats a 3-3 split in their singles matches.

To doubles they went, only to fall behind 4-3 as Powell and Paynor lost to Hanson and Raymond, 8-3.

But Phil Bell and Cedric Burgauer pulled JW back to a tie by winning a tiebreaker to capture their match at second-doubles, 9-8.

To the third doubles court, where Pleva and Hamrlik were making history in an 8-6 win that swung the match and the conference crown to Johnson & Wales.

The road to the final was a much easier one, as the Wildcats routed fourth-seeded Suffolk, 8-1. Payner, Powell, Burgauer, Tanner Esposto, and Hamrlik swept their singles matches in the second through sixth slots, giving the Cats the five points they needed to advance even before a singles double point was played.

Payner and Powell won their doubles match, 8-1. Bergauer and Bell were 8-3 winners, and Freedman and Hamrlik whitewashed their opponents, 6-0, making the final score 8-1.

Though injured in the final week, Daugherty was the GNAC's statistical leader, going 16-0 in singles play and 7-0 in doubles. His overall 17-0 record was the only unbeaten mark in the conference.

Burgauer was 10-2 overall, including 10 straight wins in doubles play during the year. Bell, improving steadily as the year rolled on, won all five of his singles starts, and won his last five doubles matches to finish 12-2 overall. Powell finished 15-5, including a 9-2 mark in singles matches.

Johnson & Wales finished 11-1 overall this season, losing only to Rhode Island College back on April 3rd. The Cats ended up winning their last eight matches in a row.

Freedman had some big help during the year from Acer Acre, his "right-hand Acer coordinated everything from practices to equipment for us throughout the year," said Freedman. "He was a great aid to the program, and to me as the coach. He did as much as any of our players to keep this great streak going.

13 Seniors to be Honored at First Hall of Fame Dinner

sports editor

The first inductees into the new Johnson & Wales Athletic Hall of Fame will be honored on Monday, May 15th, at the Johnson & Wales Inn in Seekonk.

University President Dr. John Yen, once an assistant basketball coach during the Wildcats' days as a junior college power in the sixties, will lead a group of three administrators and three former student-athletes into the newly-created Hall.

Vice President Manny Pimentel, who was Johnson & Wales' first golf coach and later helped to lead JW into the NCAA era, will be honored along with Colonel John McNulty, the former Dean of Students and Director of Athletics, who guided several Johnson & Wales track and cross country teams to national junior college meets in the sixties and seventies.

Holle Walton, a familiar face at the HarborSide Recreation Center in his role of Director of Intramurals, was an All-American who was one of the leaders of McNulty's best cross-country and track teams. Walton joins basketball great Nate Ader and Jim Gary as the first student-athlete inductees.

Adger and Gary were two of the key players in the Johnson & Wales Junior College run to the NJCAA National Championship tournament in Hutchinson, Kansas, in 1970.

That edition of the Wildcats lost to nationally-top-ranked San Jacinto Community College on a last-second basket.

The honorees will also include 13 graduation seniors who have successfully completed their Johnson & Wales athletic careers. They include Janeth Osypa, who played both volleyball and basketball; Jenn Zervis, a member of the basketball and softball teams; Maggie Roeder volleyball; Shawn Marche and Kyle Bryant, men's volleyball; Joe Espinosa and Chris LeFave, men's soccer; Jacquie Shepherd and Holly Bodwell, women's soccer; Alberto Gonzalez, baseball, Tim Goulet, hockey; and Kodia Hethman, basketball.

Tickets are still available by calling the JW Athletics Department at extension 1600.

HUTCHISON’S NO-NO HELPS SOFTBALL ‘CATS END ON HIGH NOTE

John Parente
sports editor

Laura Hutchison’s year has included an awful lot of history, so maybe it was justified that her last league pitching performance of the year be just as monumental.

A member of the first J&W basketball team to reach the Great Northeast Athletic Conference championships earlier this year, Hutchison took center stage in a softball game of major significance.
The sophomore from Jamestown, Pennsylvania, threw the first-ever no-hitter in the NCAA history of the Johnson & Wales softball team. The Wildcats beat Southern Vermont, 8-0, behind Hutchison’s masterpiece.

In the 25 games Hutchison has worked, she’s performed admirably, and allowed only two and a half runs per game over the last half of the season. But against Southern Vermont, Hutchison was downright unhittable.

Striking out nine, “Hutch” induced six routine fly ball outs, and was backed by an errorless defense. She also had a pair of hits in the victory.

J&W’s sweep was its first of the season, and allowed the Wildcats to finish the GNAC season at 5-11.

Christine Loring, the team’s outstanding catcher, was the Wildcats’ leading hitter this season, with a .369 average. Her .524 slugging percentage topped the team, and her .425 on-base percentage was second to Tina Toppan, who finished her second season with a solid .351 average. Toppan’s 33 hits were two more than Loring’s total, and sophomore Toppan’s 45 trips on the basepaths also led the team.

Newcomer Natasha Toon hit .333 in her rookie season, while two-sport standout Michelle Killen hit .324.

Gonzalez, Scholl Receive GNAC Baseball Honors

John Parente
sports editor

Senior third-baseman Alberto Gonzalez and junior pitcher Ken Scholl have received post-season honors from the Great Northeast Athletic Conference. Gonzalez, the Wildcats’ hard-hitting third baseman, was selected for a third time to the All-GNAC first team. Scholl, whose season was cut short by an ankle injury, nonetheless received a berth on the All-GNAC second team.

Gonzalez, who became the all-time career hits leader at J&W earlier this month, hit .350 this season, leading the team in batting average, hits, extra-base hits, and slugging percentage.

Scholl, who did not allow an earned run against GNAC competition this season, “has earned the respect of the entire conference,” said head coach John LaRose, who completed a very respectable first season at the helm of the Wildcat baseball team. “Everyone in the league knows how different things may have been with Scholl in the mix during the playoffs.”

Scholl suffered a severe ankle sprain just before the playoffs, missing nearly three weeks of action, including the conference tournament. Still, he was sixth in the conference in earned-run average, with a 2.02 ERA. In 24 innings of work against GNAC opposition, he did not allow a single earned run.

Scholl managed to finish his year on a positive note, coming on in relief during the middle innings in the Wildcats’ last game of the year, a two-inning stint against Rhode Island College.

Shortstop John Muszkiewicz received honorable mention after leading the Wildcats in hitting with a .400 average.

Thank you!!!

Where has it all gone? Four years, 48 months, 1,460 days, 2,102,400 minutes, any way you put it, it still has gone by at light speed. How do you remember everything that has happened? The countless laughs, the buckets of tears, the scores of friends and the crazy stunts that you thought you would never do. All of them have meaning. They hold an eternal place in your heart that you can always recall and remember how it used to be.

This issue will mark my last issue of the Campus Herald. I have produced 24 issues over my stay and I hoped that everyone enjoyed them as much as I did putting them together. There have been many people that have helped the Campus Herald along the way. Thank you! Thank you for the support and dedication that you have showed to this newspaper. A paper cannot survive without its supporters.

They say that life is to short and you should stop and smell the roses. Well I stopped for four years at J&W, the roses smell sweet and they have captured my life among their delicate petals. But it is time for me to punch out and say goodbye to everyone. I wish nothing but the best for Campus Herald and its staff in all you do.

Sincerely,

Benefits of a SADD Organization!

Ryan Clarke, contributor

"I went to a birthday party, but I remembered what you said. You told me not to drink at all, so I had a Sprite instead. I got into my own car, sure to get home in one piece. Someone should have taught him it's wrong to drink and drive, then maybe I'd still be alive." Drinking and driving has become an all too common issue in our society today. SADD (Students Against Drunk Driving) is an organization founded in 1981 by Stephen Wallace, to address the issue of drunk driving, and to educate people on the effects of drinking and driving. There are over 25,000 chapters in the United States, although Johnson & Wales lacks one. Issues with students do not only relate to drinking and driving, but teen suicide as well. SADD could be a beneficial organization here at Johnson & Wales because it works to help students with alcohol and suicide issues.

SADD is an organization, which used to only be against drunk driving, but is now against underage drinking as well. This does not mean an underage person cannot drink, but he or she should at least know the risks involved with it. Drinking is a part of the college scene, and after a few drinks a person is really not aware of how much alcohol he or she has consumed, which can lead to alcohol poisoning. I have witnessed many incidents where people were close to experiencing alcohol poisoning. I had to lie by their sides, so they did not choke on their own vomit. People really do not see the risks entailed with drinking. Even here at Johnson & Wales we lost a Phi Kappa Sigma fraternity brother on April 18th, 2000. What an unnecessary tragedy this was. It was stated, "In 1997, 16,189 people were killed and more than a million were injured in crashes involving alcohol." People need to know what the risks of drinking are so that they do not believe it will never happen to them or a loved one, so they do not believe that they are invincible in reality. It may happen to them or a loved one. Some events that I have seen organized to make people aware are "Dead Day," this is where a fatal car accident is staged so that people can see the effects. Students are even placed onto stretchers and soaked in fake blood to give a more vivid image. Maybe if Johnson & Wales University had an event like this it would be placed into the mind of each and every student; preventing them from drinking and driving altogether. If there is only one way to drive home, they also relate to depression/suicide issues with students.

Being in a whole new environment can cause problems with students. Some students cannot deal with being away from home, or not being with friends from home. College can be a traumatic new experience. Sometimes students become depressed due to the new environment and if this is not recognized it could lead to suicide. Students sometimes think that they are alone in this great big world, and that no one cares for them, so they should just live. Depression can result from a chain of events. If a student has troubles on his or her mind, this may lead to stress, leading to bad grades, leading to more stress. Suicide is the third leading cause of death for persons between 15 and 25, meaning thousands of unnecessary deaths occur each year. SADD changed their name from Students Against Drunk Driving because they knew there were more issues that needed to be addressed among young adults. If students had someone to listen, a place to turn to, maybe they could resolve these internal and external conflicts.

What this University needs is a SADD organization. It can help to address serious issues we all deal with on a daily basis. This is not a plea to stop drinking, because it is obvious that we will not be accomplished. This is a plea to make a difference, and to save lives. If people become aware of these risks of drunk driving, and hear about real life experiences, it may make them think twice before they get behind the wheel drunk. It may help them to stop a friend from making the wrong choice. With this organization, we the student body could provide a facility where troubled students could go when they help. I know some students are embarrassed to ask for help, which is why SADD has become involved in Yellow Ribbon Week. It is stated, "Many more than 1,000 lives have been saved, more than 1.5 million yellow low ribbon cards have been received, and 19,000 letters asking for help have been received." A student does not know how to ask for help, is afraid to ask, can just say I need to use my yellow ribbon. Students helping other students will receive so many benefits, like knowing they saved a life or just brightened a person's day.

SADD could be a beneficial organization here at Johnson & Wales University because these are "real issues", ones that occur across the United States every day. If the student body could take a moment through think about how they could help to save lives, including their own by knowing the effects of alcohol, also by talking about their problems, it will make the organization worthwhile. There are too many drunk driving accidents, and suicides that happen right around us, so we need to address these realities. By addressing them, we can help to solve them. Another benefit to students participating in this organization could be fulfilling his or her community service requirement. For persons who are interested in helping to start this organization here at Johnson & Wales University, go to the Friendship Building located near PPAC. Together, we can fight to save the precious lives of people who are troubled by these issues.

Long Trip

This fabulous journey we've taken Will soon come to an end. It has gone by so fast I can't quite comprehend. Feelings of sadness swell. How do I say goodbye to friends I know? The ones that laughed with me, The ones who helped me grow. Though we'll go our separate ways, One couldn't put distance between friendship. We'll always have our memories Of this long and wonderful trip.

By Tabbitha Webster

This poem is dedicated to all my friends here at Johnson & Wales. For those who are graduating and will not be returning, I'll miss you deeply. For those who are continuing on, I can only say that our friendship will grow this upcoming year. I love you guys with all of my heart.
