The Multicultural Center Rededicates itself to the Johnson & Wales Community

“The Multicultural Center received a face lift in the hopes to attract new cultural faces.”

On September 27, the Multicultural Center was rededicated to the campus community. Karrien K. Kanston, director of the center, opened the program with a brief history of the Multicultural Center. The program was well attended by students, staff, and employees of the University. Entertainment was provided by the school's own adjunct Professor Richard Carbone and friends. The jazz band added a wonderful touch to a joyful occasion.

Mr. Kanston recognized two of the University's outstanding student leaders: Vice President of the Student Government Jerelyn Campes and the President of the International Club Senia Saeed for their support of the Multicultural Center who both gave a brief speech. Thomas Farrell, dean of the John Hazen White School of Arts & Sciences, spoke about the future "diversity" vision point and the importance of the Multicultural Center. The Dean expressed to the students that if they say they are going to do something then they should make sure it gets done.

The program’s climax came when Kanston presented two plaques, one with the date of when the Center was first dedicated to the University community and the rededication date, and a second plaque with the mission statement of the Center and the past two directors' names (Prof. Thomas Gaines founding director & Bernard Pitts-Wiley second director) and dates worked. The plaques will be hung in the Center for future reference.

Kanston told the audience that the Multicultural Center's doors are open to the whole campus community. He wants the campus community to know that the Center is not only for Blacks and Latinos but is for all people of different races, creeds, shapes, sizes, professional backgrounds, lifestyles, religions, ages, gender, sexual orientations, professional positions, education, and any other differences. He welcomes all its use of the services of the Center.

The event ended with a special thanks to James Clements, Jr., assistant director of the Multicultural Center, Office Assistants Tobogo Hirschfeld, Ibrahim Othman and work-study students for their outstanding support.

The Center now has a handicapped restroom, new carpet, new ceiling, sound system with hearing impaired capability, restruc-tured stained glass windows, and a new office.

New Tourist Potato Head Receives Racial Attention!

Is this Hawaiian dressed and beached tanned Mr. Potato Head a racial problem?

As many tourists visit Rhode Island and enjoy seeing the Hashbro Potato Heads, others are seeing one particular 'tater as a racist image. The "Tourist Potato Head," with his Hawaiian shirt and straw hat, may be taken down from its location at Warwick City Hall.

Affirmative-action officials are bothered by the garments and skin tone of the potato head and feel violated by its meaning. The creator of this particular 'tater is Kathy Szarko, who didn't expect to receive such negative feedback after unveiling this new potato head. Her simple plan was to create a potato head with a tourist's tan.

With forty different potato heads spread throughout the whole state, many other heads are dressed in ethnic clothing and perceived in many different ways. The state has implemented these heads to gain the interest of tourists around the country, not to promote racism or discrimination. The "Tourist Tater" has been showcased for more than four months, which were the main tourist months, before these speculations occurred. Szarko explained her creation as "just a potato, which is dark brown anyway, who had a suntan."

Warwick Mayor Scott Avedisian is working to make the appropriate arrangements concerning the potato head and the meaning behind its clothing and skiing tone. If in the area of Warwick City Hall, stop to see this controversial Mr. Potato Head.
Olympic Village Still Safe and Secure

As the Olympic games go on and athletes bring home medals and honor, the Olympic Village remains in good condition. During the 1996 Olympics, tourists placed a bomb in a trash can located several hundred feet from the nightly activities. This hasn’t been the case thus far in Sydney.

Although some Bulgarians have been sent home for theft of goods, "no drugs or any harmful substines have been found and everything seems to be running smoothly," said Graham Richardson, the village mayor. The village is a temporary home for nearly 17,000 and needs to be safe at all times of the day and night. Security is kept in place throughout the games and events.

J & W Students Step to Class with Style

As the new school year begins, students can't help but check out what other fellow Johnson & Wales students are wearing. Each person brings his or her own unique style to the campus, but there are some trends that are common among students here at J & W. Walking around campus, it's evident that the most essential element of style to students is comfort. It's important to feel comfortable and dress casually, while at the same time looking trendy.

Fashion faves among the females on campus seem to be capri pants, ankle length skirts, classic black pants, length shirts, ankle length boots and platform shoes, and different versions of the timeless jean jacket. Whereas the males on campus don't seem to be nearly as fashion conscious. Jeans, T-shirts, sweatshirts, and sweaters seem to suit the majority of them just fine. GAP and Abercrombie & Fitch are commonly worn labels for both genders. They are symbols of comfort and style for the college student.

But besides the trends here at Johnson and Wales, the fashion world is constantly evolving and creating newers trends. According to magazines such as Cosmopolitan and Elle, this season's hottest trends for women will include anything sueded and leather, plaid, stylish trench coats, gold and little bits of fur here and there. As for the future of fashion, it seems to have a lot to do with the new millennium. With the promise of a new century, also comes the promise of new styles and trends, which may go along with cyberspace advancements and groundbreaking technology sure to come with the 21st century.

Futuristic fabrics and space age influences such as metalic prints and silver and gold tones have been cropping up the last few seasons and will continue to do so. These styles have unmistakably reflected our transition to a new millennium and will without a doubt shine through in the emerging trends of the future.

"Friendly, Reliable, Convient Service for J & W Students"

Team Computer Products, Inc. has announced the opening of another college store at 291 Westminster Avenue in Providence to serve Johnson & Wales University with computer sales and service for most major computer brands. Team’s store will be right on the Johnson & Wales campus for the convenience of students and faculty, according to Daniel Graierstein, general manager for the company.

“We’re pleased to partner with Johnson & Wales in this enterprise,” noted Graierstein. “Team has nearly two decades of experience in the college market; we understand the computer needs of students. They want fast, reliable, competent service; competitively priced major-brand computers, monitors and peripherals; and technicians who speak in language non-technicians can understand.”

Team Computer has been selling and servicing computer systems in both higher educational institutions and public schools throughout Connecticut since 1983. Team has established programs at Yale University, the University of New Haven, the University of Hartford, Quinnipiac College, Saint Joseph College, the Connecticut State University System, Albertus Magnus, Rensselaer University, and the Hamden Public School System. Team is an authorized educational reseller for all major brands – including IBM, Compaq, NEC, Hewlett-Packard, Dell, Toshiba and Gateway; a reseller partner with Ingram Alliance Distribution, MicroAge and TechData; and a major educational dealer for Microsoft, Corel, Lotus, and others, as well as servicing Apple Computers.

Howard Cuthcart has been hired as Store Manager for the new Johnson & Wales operation. Cuthcart was previously employed by the Franklin Public Schools as a system engineer for the school district. Along with various technology certifications, he has a degree in computer science and many years of experience in the technology field. Prior to his service with the Franklin Public School System, Cuthcart was a service manager for a major retail chain. Rounding out the store’s staff, Michael Paulino and Peter Wasarou have been named system engineers for the facility.

The Team Computer store at Johnson & Wales officially opened for operations on August 30. For more information, contact Team at 988-1518.

Rhode Island Restaurant Tour

Critiquing Restaurants around the City of Providence

NAPA VALLEY GRILLE

David Hildebrandt, Brian Kello, Cherie LeViot Restaurant Review

Have you ever wondered if there are any good restaurants in Rhode Island? Chances are there is one at every single corner and in every single community in Rhode Island. Well the three of us (David Hildebrandt, Brian Kello, and Cherie LeViot) have taken it upon ourselves to try and inform the Johnson & Wales community about some of the best, and most affordable restaurants. We will be visiting roughly fifteen different establishments throughout the area.

Now to the good stuff...... On Friday, September 22 at about 8:45 pm we all started on our new adventure. We traveled to the Napa Valley Grille, in the Providence Place Mall. Once we were seated by a waitress named Danielle, we received an extensive wine list of which Danielle was very knowledgeable. It turns out the staff has a wine tasting every Wednesday. This means if you are the wine enthusiast and are looking for a new wine to taste, Napa Valley Grille is just the place for you. After about 10 minutes of gazing at the menu in awe, we finally decided on our choices for the evening. Their menu is very diverse in entrée selection as well as cooking styles. Prices are a little higher than most restaurants, but are definitely worth every penny. Soups are around $4.95, and appetizers and salads range from $7.95 - $8.85. Our entrées were between $17.95 - $24.95. The desserts were only $7. These prices seem very high at first glance, but let us assure you that they are truly worth it.

Cherie chose an astonishing potablella and potato bisque, which was perfectly seasoned and not overly salty like many soups are. David chose what he thought was going to be a fried calamari and shrimp appetizer. Boy, was he in for a treat? He not only got calamari and shrimp that were perfectly deep-fried accompanied with fried lemons, oranges, and capers. This was a definite surprise. The lemons were a little overpowering, but their dipping sauce proved to be the perfect complement to the high intensity lemons. Brian chose an heirloom salad which consisted of yellow and red tomatoes, fresh mozzarella and aged balsamic vinaigretto. This salad was definitely the perfect example of the latest in culinary trends. The word that came to mind to describe this dish was incredible.

The manager, Michael Darshy, then came over and had a brief talk with us. Before we knew it we were being preceded and served our main course. David had a baked chicken with an apple-based sauce. The sauce was excellent and complemented the chicken perfectly, which was a little dry. A simple serving of macaroni and cheese accompanied the chicken. Yes, that’s right, good old mac and cheese as well as some broccoli rabe, which was not up to par. Brian had that day special, a grilled sirloin steak with a sweet cabernet sauce and smoked tomato butter. The steak was cooked to perfection and exactly medium rare, just as Brian wanted it. It was served with fried shoestring onions, piled mile high, which we all felt a great liking to. Cherie chose the penne with grilled chicken in an Indonesian curry sauce. On first smell we all thought this pasta would be overpowering. Boy were we wrong, way wrong. This pasta had such a succulent flavor that we are still salivating over it today.

After all that, we still had room for dessert. We knew we would be in for a treat, and that it was. The pastry chef, Adrian Vasquez does a superb job on the use of height and intriguing designs for his plate presentations. Brian’s chocolate mouse-brownie dessert had a sweet surprise as he cut into it. Under the mouse was a layer of sweet raspberries. Cherie had a Hazelnut-Blueberry tart, topped with vanilla bean ice cream on top of a sweet mango sauce, that was still warm and burning with the tang of chili. Brian’s dessert, the only freshest berries and, before long, we all had our forks in her dessert. Dave had a blackberry pear dessert, and it was absolutely delicious. The only disappointment was that there were only a couple of blackberries, but maybe we are just desiring blackberry fans. We were thoroughly impressed with the service at Napa Valley as well as the food. Good service always makes for a great place to eat. Remember that Family/Homecoming week is coming up and this would be a great place to take your family or that special someone. Join us in the next issue as our next adventure will be to Chez’s Waterfront. Oh... and yes both bathrooms were spotless. Until next time... Happy dining.

Featuring: While Was Gone
By: Sue Miller

Do you ever wonder what would happen if the last meet up with you one day?
Jo Becker Norris had her life planned for her. She was a married medical school student by her parents' choice and was sure to live happily ever after, but it did not last that long. She soon realized that she was not part of her own life and decided that she needed to find herself before she could settle down.

In the summer of 1968, Jo Becker Norris arrived on the steps of a Cambridge home, inside was a world she knew nothing about but would soon come to be a big part of it. After being casually interviewed by the housemates she (using the assumed name Felicia Stead) was accepted into the group. For one year, six people lived together in a house that had no rules, no restrictions and nothing but good times. Felicia soon befriended Dana, another female in the house and the two were soon best friends. Felicia was the person Jo was afraid to be. All of the carefree living stopped the night Felicia came home and faced a horrific scene. After this, the house was left empty.

Decades later, Jo had the life she dreamed of. She worked in a veterinary clinic, had wonderful husband named Daniel, and three beautiful daughters. Jo could not be happier, she was in love with the man of her dreams with a great family to share him for. Everything seemed to be just the way one would hope. One day, the past walks in the clinic. Eli Mayhew was a housemate of hers in Cambridge and Jo started to feel things that she had not felt in years. The two soon became friendly and started meeting and having dinner with each other. They talked about the past, the present and the future. Soon Jo's marriage began to suffer as a result of her new-found friend. Daniel started to pull away, Jo planned to meet Eli in Boston one day and it was this that dramatically changed the characters' lives. What happens next profoundly affects Jo and her family.

This book will make you laugh, make you cry and most of all makes you think about your past. The book gives you an understanding of what could happen if just one event in your life was dealt with in a different way. What would you change, if anything?

Democracy was the buzzword on Saturday, September 16, when Rhode Island held "Pledge to Vote Democracy Compact Youth Forum" at the Providence Performing Art Center. The forum's intent was to share the soapbox with younger American voters. So they could voice their complaints or social woes.

In attendance were Senator Lincoln Chafee, Republican Bob Weygand, Secretary of State Jim Langevin, Steve Cabral, Robert Tingle, Chris Young, Kenneth Proulx, Rodney Driver, and Dorman Hayes Jr. There was also a youth panel that addressed the hopeful senators and congressmen.

No one asked the infamous "Boxer or Brief" questions. Instead our peers hit the candidates hardest with such topics as youth health insurance, environmental laws, college finances, gun violence, inner city life, and other youth concerns.

Not only were the candidates surprised, they seemed unprepared to answer questions on such heavy topics. The forum turned into a crude game of political dodge ball. The youths in the crowd became annoyed and restless as candidates began to avoid question after question. No one seemed to really address our generation's concerns. Many of the candidates seemed very aware of the cameras by plugging themselves at every opportunity. Our own Nic Evans, student government president, did not back down by trying to get the panelists focused on the issues at hand. Nic was an excellent representative for Johnson & Wales.

The Youth Forum was not a complete loss, it made our generation realize it's time to break the cookie cutter mold of politicians and start placing people in office, who do represent our America. So it is up to us to change the political pattern of our society. VOTE!

Remember the Titans
Chik Nekwosu
Movie Review
Happiness, Joy, Excitement, Sadness, Pain...
These are all emotions that you will feel when watching "Remember The Titans".

The star of this production is Denzel Washington (Coach Boone), yes ladies, the one and only DENEZEL, he is the head coach of the high school. The story line is centered on the T.C. William High School football team; you guys must be feeling this movie. Other popular stars in the movie include Will Patton (Coach Yoast), the emotional coach, Donald Faison (Pete), who starred in "Clueless" as Aaaryn, Wood Harris (Big Ju). Some of the fresh faces include Kip Pardue (Sunshine), and Kristin Leigh-Jones (Niccy Boone), Denzel's daughter.

One word that comes to mind during the length of the movie, Racism, this movie is a perfect example of what life was like during the integration period. It addresses the issue of racial discrimination during the 1970's. In 1971, three schools of different ethnic backgrounds were mixed, people didn't take well to this change. This also meant that the football team would consist of white and black boys. As you watch this movie, you will discover why these boys were the first to jump over the racial discrimination line, why they did it and the effect it had on the rest of the school and town.

This movie also shows how Coach Boone (Denzel), the first black coach in T.C. William High School, overcame all the oppositions and triumphed over all his trials. At the beginning of the movie, he came off as a hard ruthless man who only cares about football and his career as a football coach, but as the movie goes on, you will go on an emotional roller coaster with this man and his choices in life.

Coach Boone and Coach Yoast would be what most people consider a bad cop and goo cop combination. Boone had his strengths and weaknessess, and Yoast helped him where he was weak. You would wonder what weakness a great person like the coach would possess, but you would have to see the movie to figure it out.

For those of you out there who may not be interested in another "Varsity Blue", have no fear, this movie has a lot of lessons to teach and information to give you apart from the game of football. For those of you who want to watch some football, then you got it. This movie would be considered one with a serious message to give to the audience, but there is a lot of comic relief in it also. The boys keep you smiling or laughing from beginning to end. There might be a few drops of tears, but all to a good avail.

"One of Denzel's best performances ever"

"That's everything," my father said as he set down my TV on the floor.
"Do you want us to help you unpack?" My mother asked. I could tell she didn't want me to leave just yet. She was having a severe case of the empty nest syndrome. I was the last of her children to leave home, and I knew she wasn't ready for it.

"No, I want to get settled by myself." I hoped the sooner we said good-bye the less messy things would get. "Ok, I guess I'll see you in October when we come to visit." dad said, and gave me a hug.

What my mother did next surprised me. "Have fun, and if you need anything, call us," she said. Then she gave me a hug and she and my dad left. No crying, no babbling on about how much she loved me, nothing. I was a little puzzled. I didn't dwell it on for long though, because another thought quickly popped into my head. I'm free!

It had been eighteen years living in the same small town, in the same house, dealing with the same people, the same everything. Now, finally, what I had yearned for so long... change. For the first time in my life, I'm living in a new place, I don't know anyone, and everything is unfamiliar. It's the most incredible feeling I've experienced in a long time.

Are you bored? Not sure what to do with your day? Here are a few ideas better than the norm!

The Feinstein Community Service Center at Johnson & Wales wants your help. We have many upcoming events and we need the help of volunteers.

* From October 5 through October 8, we are looking for volunteers to help at a downtown event; assisting with purchasing, glazing, and firing ceramic pieces for up to four hours on any day. This event is to benefit City Center Contemporary Arts.
* October is Breast Cancer Awareness Month! Please do your part to help end the fight. We need students to help for 1-3 hours on October 15, at the Make-A-Stride Against Breast Cancer five-mile walk.
* Hasbro Children's Hospital is sponsoring the Ocean State Marathon on November 10 - 12. Volunteers are needed for various times and activities.

Looking for a PT/FT job that's fun, flexible, and will pay well for school? How does up to a $1000 per year sound?

That's right T.G.I. Friday's has a tuition reimbursement benefit. That if you qualify, you can receive up to a $1000 per year.

"Dirty, lazy, smelly, a waste of taxpayers money, a drain on the econoy..." When you ask the typical person what words they would use to describe the hungry and homeless population within our society, these, or words very similar to these, might come to mind. To be honest, before this past summer, I may have been guilty of using one or two of these terms to make reference to some of those particular individuals. In hindsight, I am quite ashamed of the fact that I was ignorant enough to fall subject to stereotyping and my own preconceived notions about this fragile population.

As a new staff member in the Feinstein Community Service Department here at Johnson & Wales, I was assigned to a project in which I would conduct in-depth informational interviews with both the directors and clients of several shelters, emergency feeding sites and food rescue facilities in the nearby community. The reasons for this project were twofold. First, I wanted to better familiarize myself with the sites and people I'd be working with in the upcoming year. And second, I wanted to open my eyes to the real problems and issues the community faces on a daily basis.

As I began the first interview, I was extremely nervous as to the responses I would get to some of the more personal questions I would be asking. Much to my surprise, throughout the entire interview process, I began looking at the clients from a very different perspective, and I began to more clearly understand why they were in the position they were in. Surprisingly, many of the clients were not much different from you or me. In fact, many of them, at one point in their lives, had achieved more than I could ever hope for. I met college graduates, former stockbrokers, family people want are the same opportunities that many of us take for granted. They want to be treated like people and not just as an obligation to the community. They realize that society frowns upon them, and to walk through life as a burden to others does not help anyone feel like a valuable component to society. Their understanding of their position was strikingly obvious as I could see the sadness in their eyes, a sadness that no one should have to bear.

It is time for change. If I can spend 30 minutes with Don, Wesley, Renee, Desiree and the many others I was fortunate enough to meet, and have a complete reversal of notions within me about who these members of the com-

The Rewards for Being A Teacher
Just get even Better!

THE TEACHER REWARD PROGRAM
O% Interest Student Loan

Teaching has its own rewards. Your salary pays basic needs, but it doesn’t pay retirement or medical insurance. Most teachers are forced to spend their own hard earned money to pay for their own retirement and medical insurance. A new, lower payment system is created for eligible teachers. That’s right, it’s even more rewarding.

Tuition aid is earned for up to three years of service.

Just register at the special site for the first year or at the special site for the second or third year, pay the amounts due in a reasonable manner, and you will receive the maximum tuition reduction for the year. You will also receive a benefit of eligibility after one year of service.

"Click on the Perfect Job"

Heather Goode
Staff Writer

Remember scrambling through want ads in the Sunday paper, circling jobs never receiving a response? They’re almost gone but not forgotten. How easy is it now just to log on to a computer, maneuver a mouse and click online job sites.

More and more people are realizing that the Internet has so much to offer. That the dot.com world is taking over. The recent job searching process is much more strenuous than ever before with the increasing unemployment soaring up to a nation’s high.

There are many web search engines such as AOL, Yahoo, MSN, and EXIS that deal with specific careers that are used to guide first time users through the process. Then you can always use the all purpose sites like monster.com, & hotjobs.com. "It is much better to go online with defined notion of your ideal job, but it’s also good to be flexible," said Janet Pech, who went to monster.com and found a successful job just a few weeks ago.

Pech currently works as senior editor of about.com but has accepted a position as conference producer at the Institute for International Research. It is also better to indicate your salary restrictions and geographic wants, when searching. After being on monster.com two times, Pech received e-mails from the site regarding jobs that fit her specifications.

There are more job seekers using this method to find successful jobs. There is an option on most sites to post a resume. There is no cover letter needed and this makes the search much easier for the employers to see what you have to offer. "One other benefit to posting your resume is employers can come to you with jobs that you never even knew existed," said Pech. Where as searching in the paper narrows down job options.

Submitting a resume electronically does take away from your traditional resume, with the cover letter, references, and salaries but unlike the hard-copied resumes often get reformat ted. Posting a resume on an Internet job site is an easy process where you are guided every step of the way.

Suggestions are given involving the removal of bullet points and bold print to all applicants.

The Sunday want ads are still well alive but this is the Y2K year and technology is leading the way. Jump into the new millennium with the perfect net job by posting a resume online.

J & W Girls
Volleyball: Becoming a Strong force in the GNAC Conference

John Parente
Director Sports Info.

Johnson & Wales volleyball team has had a monkey on its back since joining the Great Northeast Athletic Conference. The 'Cats could never beat St. Joseph College.

In fact, neither could anyone else. From 1997 until last Wednesday, St. Joe's had run a string of 42 consecutive GNAC regular-season matches without a loss.

That is, of course, until the Wildcats put a sudden stop on the streak with a 3-0 whitewash at the Harborside RAC.

Indeed, J & W played a near-flawless three games against a Blue Jay team that was good, but not good enough, or deep enough to withstand the Wildcat attack.

After playing so many games against so many of the premier teams in New England over the first three weeks of the season, the Wildcats were ready for their biggest GNAC encounter of the year. And Johnson & Wales took everything St. Joseph College could throw at them, and lost it aside. From the back row play of Jen Lithwin and Patterson Watkins, to the aces served up by Carlie Wosick, to the front court slams of Shana Eigen, Meredith Merrill, and Sarah Haslem, every-things went right for the Wildcats. But there was one other major story.

When freshman Kim Cyr was introduced, she ran over to offer the traditional handshake to Jeanne DiGiacomo, the highly-successful coach of St. Joe's. DiGiacomo playfully and in good fun greeted Cyr with "Oh, a Connecticut girl," not fully knowing that Cyr grew up in East Hartford, just a few miles from the SJC campus in West Hartford. If DiGiacomo wasn't familiar with Cyr before the match, she sure was afterwards.

Cyr, making a rare start, led the Wildcats with 14 kills, including six powerful slams in the first game, when J & W served note that this was to be her night of nights. With Cyr in high gear, and with the help of two of Haslem's four aces, and three kills by Haslem, the 'Cats took game one, 15-6.

St. Joseph College took a lead in the second game, but J & W roared back for a 15-13 win, as Merrill, Eigen, Haslem, and Cyr, each had a pair of kills.

Then, in the third, down 5-8, the Wildcats got their act together for a final turn, and turned their play back to a notch after Coach Jamie Murray called a well-timed time out. Haslem came up with a big dig, three kills, and fabulous floor play. Lithwin served five points to bring the 'Cats back up front, and contributed two digs in the finale as well. When dumps by Eigen and Haslem brought an end to the streak, the 'Cats made quick work of the team that, with J & W, has been the cream of the conference.

The Wildcats step out of the GNAC on Thursday night to face in-state rival Roger Williams and Division II Assumption College at the Harborside RAC, beginning at 6pm. On Thursday, October 12th, J & W faces Coast Guard at seven.

Looking for a "Few Good Sailors"

Johnson & Wales' sailing club is looking for a few more members.

The club, now in its third year, practices with the Brown University team just a few hundred yards from the Harborside Campus on Narragansett Bay.

The team also competes against other colleges and universities each spring and fall.

Although experienced sailors are preferred, anyone with a desire to learn how to sail is invited. For more information, call the Department of Athletics at 598-1600.
Wildcat Soccer has
The Competition on Their Heels

John Parente
Director, Sports Info.

No matter whether it’s a Johnson & Wales men’s or women’s soccer game, seeing the Wildcats in action has definitely been a treat for this year.

The two teams entered the past weekend with a combined record of 17-3-2, and both were enjoying their best starts in the University’s NCAA history.

The men’s team, 9-1 overall, got back on the winning track last Wednesday when they dumped Eastern Nazarene in a nonleague encounter, 4-1.

The women’s team, meanwhile, continued to make history by beating Rhode Island College, 2-1, last Thursday, for their first victory ever over RIC in women’s soccer.

The men’s team’s only loss came after seven straight wins. River’s temporarily derailed the Wildcats in a Great Northeast Athletic Conference game, 5-0.

The women’s team’s last loss is almost ancient history. In the second week of the season, national- ly 15th-ranked Framingham State beat the Wildcats, 2-1, in overtime.

The women’s game against RIC was a classic, decided in jaw-dropping fashion from an unlikely source.

Freshman forward Danielle Kelly lofted a fifty-yard shot neatly into the top corner of the net—a perfectly placed lightning bolt that zapped Rhode Island College’s comeback effort in the 82nd minute.

Granted, Kelly may not have exactly placed the ball where it landed, but it turned out to be an impossible shot for RIC keeper Michaela Morin to stop. It simply rainbowed its way to an unreachable top corner, setting off a thunderous roar from the good-sized crowd that made it to Pierce Stadium on a chilly night for soccer.

The Wildcats had grabbed the lead in the 10th minute when they executed a perfect corner kick conversion. Lucia Sanchez’ corner was headed into the goal by the versatile Mundtjima Abdul-Karim. The freshmen connection’s goal stood for about 20 minutes, until RIC’s Kaitlin Schimmel scored on a breakaway to tie the game at one.

After Kelly’s goal, the ‘Cats relied on another freshman—keeper Jessica Obst, and whatever defense they could muster to hold Rhode Island College off the board. The Wildcats were unlucky throughout the second half. Three shots hit the goal posts, including a pretty shot by Mashael Periy, who deserved better on her effort.

Still, the ‘Cats were able to knock off a game RIC team and go into their showdown with defending GNAC champion Simmons with that gaudy 9-1 mark.

The men’s team defeated Eastern Nazarene behind some of their steadier play to date. Goals by Doug Schulman and “Mimi-Doug,” John Sassman, sealed the win in the later stages of the second half. Sassman assisted on Sassman’s goal.

The Wildcats had spotted the Crusaders a 1-0 lead, but tied about midway through the first half. The ‘Cats then caught a break when ENC inadvertently spanked the ball into its own net—a Rob Conroy shot that was deflected the wrong way for an own goal.

Trevor Foden and Phil Marx shared the goalkeeping duties for the Wildcats, with Foden making five first-half saves and Marx adding five saves of his own in the second.

The Wildcats women return to Pierce Stadium for a pair of games this week. On Wednesday, it’s Southern Vermont at 4:00. On Saturday, J & W faces Emmanuel at 1:00.

The women’s team’s final regular-season home game is another night contest on Tuesday, October 10th against Umass-Dartmouth.

The men’s team is on the road for a grueling six games. They’ll return to Pierce for their final GNAC contest, against Daniel Webster on Saturday, October 21st, at 1:00.
