Cooperative Education - Work, Learn, More Work, and, oh, Participate in the Culinary Olympics?

By Christopher S. Bice

If you have ever had a dream to work internationally, your best bet is to spend some part of your education overseas. However, most students never get the opportunity to do what David Quisenberry, a Johnson & Wales Culinary Arts student, did. David participated in an international program run through the College of Culinary Arts and the Career Development Office.

Let me paint you a picture. Imagine spending February through October in the beautiful and lush Welsh countryside, living and working at Hotel Maes-y-Neuadd ("The Mansion in the Meadow"). The hotel stands on 7.5 acres of landscaped lawns, orchard and paddock on a wooded hillside high above the waters of Tremadog Bay. It is solidly built of Welsh granite and slate, dating back to the 14th-century with 16th- and 18th-century additions. The scenery is spectacular, but the food is the real reason to visit. Combining French, Welsh and English influences, Maes-y-Neuadd's food is known throughout this magical land.

However wonderful this may sound, David was not there for an extended vacation. In fact, he spent all of his time in the kitchen, learning how to be a part of the Maes-y-Neuadd's spectacular 5-star culinary team, which according to him, was no easy task.

The first few weeks in the kitchen, David had certain responsibilities, but was soon let loose. To get an idea of the meals that come out of Maes-y-Neuadd's kitchen, think of a six-course dinner with a four-course dessert. Not only that, but the menu changes daily and everything is prepared by hand and made from fresh foods. Many of the fresh ingredients used in the meals came from the kitchen gardens that are on sight. David had no choice but to learn time management, especially since he was the only one preparing certain dishes that were expected of him. He knew there was no room for mistakes. Even if David did make a mistake, there was no time to start over.

David brought with him to Maes-y-Neuadd experience from previously being a Sous Chef for a catering company started by friends. While at the catering company, called A Sharper Palette Catering Company, David would supervise up to 16 chefs at a time, but soon discovered that he had gaps in his culinary knowledge. He had a decision to make: either go to New York City to make a name for himself, or attend Johnson & Wales University. David chose the latter, opting to go for the "brass ring."

While working at Maes-y-Neuadd, David was able to participate in an experience that no other Cooperative Education student has. Chef Peter Jackson, chef and owner of Hotel Maes-y-Neuadd, who was the manager and founder of the Welsh Culinary Team, invited him to participate. The Welsh Team was slated to compete at the 2000 Culinary Olympics in Germany. The Culinary Olympics is a competition where teams from around the world come and prepare five entrée plates in set categories with certain requirements. Then the best chefs in the world judge the food with every country having their own judge, in such categories as content, quality of menu, color, presentation and choice of food pairings.

Each team draws when they are to prepare their food, and the Welsh team drew Monday and had to have their food prepared by 7:00 a.m. This meant the team was in the kitchen Saturday morning at 8:00 a.m. and did not leave until their food was presented Monday morning. While David wasn't actually preparing the main dishes himself, he did lend his services and help the Welsh team out.

"I felt very humble," David said. "They brought me into their fold and trusted me. There were 12 people on the team, not including me, and I was able to work inside the team and behind the scenes. It was no easy task for the team to get to the competition, and we hosted numerous fundraisers to get there."

While working at Maes-y-Neuadd, David learned a different philosophy of cooking in that a chef should never waste anything. Also, that the food by itself speaks volumes and it does not have to be heavily flavored.

"I didn't have to read about this place in a book, I actually got to experience it first hand. I want to take my cooking as far as I can take it. I'm not interested in cooking for the money, but interested in the pursuit of knowledge. Pick foods that complement one another, not ones that cover up the taste."

David recently graduated, and when asked how he feels: "I might be comfortable with someone calling me chef in 20 years. Chefs all struggle to find identity and who they are and what their style of cooking is. I'm still experimenting."

Have fun experimenting, David!

Interview with Dean of Students, Terry Addison

By Jenn Maksel

Maybe you think of Terry Addison as "that discipline guy". You know, the one who resides at the end of the hallway in the Citizen's Bank Building, the one you are sent to see when you do something wrong at Johnson & Wales University. Well, discipline might be part of his job, but that is far from what Dean Addison feels is his role at J & W.

Terry Addison was born in Memphis Tennessee, but spent all of his college years at the University of Minnesota. He enjoyed his time in Minnesota, which he described as a "progressive state", but when the call came to live in Rhode Island, he was all for it. Dean Addison spent time at URI, working in the Department of Multicultural Services for Students. This was a division to help all students of different races, nationalities and religions to be assimilated into the URI campus. The Dean also spent some time at the YMCA, both in Kingstown and right down the street, in Providence. He now resides in Warwick with his wife and two sons.

One of my first questions to Dean Addison was "What made you come to J & W?" No sooner than I had asked the question, did I have an answer, or should I say answers. The Dean felt that J & W has a reputation for "being innovative and valuing talent." He felt that although the University has a lot going for it, it is still in a state where ideas can be voiced, and followed through to make them a reality. He also mentioned that J & W is a very entrepreneurial place, where new ideas are always welcome, and even encouraged. Dean Addison jumped at the chance to be back on a college campus, to be back working with people earning degrees for higher education.

Dean Addison had a few ideas to help improve the University, or a few things that he would like to concentrate on. He feels that students need an advocate, someone to trust, respect and that they are comfortable talking to. He hopes, that as more and more students get to meet and speak with him, that he will be able to fulfill this role to a greater extent. He also wants to see more information distributed about alcohol awareness. He noted the fact that we have an alcohol task force, and that we are considered a dry campus. The dean feels that students need to recognize when someone is abusing alcohol.

The Multicultural Center and You

A place to learn, socialize and relax

By - R.C. Ford

When you walk into the Multicultural Center at Johnson & Wales University you are walking into what Director Karriem Kanston calls "the Big Living Room". The Multicultural Center has come a long way from the old millenium. Having the inside updated to accomodate the students, faculty and programs that venture there, the Center has become a home away from home for some students. The environment is one that allows for students to congregate, express opinions that have and even learn about the diversity among this college campus.

The Multicultural Center - The "Big Living Room" full of TLC

The Center now has an updated sound system, new floors, staff and art work. the Multicultural Center is handicap accessible and is located in an area full of spirit. The Center has limited seating but this adds to the coziness of it. In the future the center hopes to acquire computers with Internet acces, a projector and screen, and more visual aids. Continued on page 2

Director Karriem Kanston and Workstudy Ephrem Shelby stand proudly at the Multicultural Center

Dedicated Multicultural Center Expresses....

“The door is Open, come in!”

The staff of the center are dedicated in teaching, communicating, and expressing the various cultures that are present not only in the University but amongst the world. With over 10 workstudies, two office assistants and along with a director and assistant director that center has plenty of staff to help in programming and the set up of events.

Speaking with the director and a workstudy of the center, they expressed how they carry the responsibilities of teaching others about culture throughout their days. Taking what they learn and teach in the center to other functions throughout the University. The stated that they have “TLC” for all who come thru the door, not turing away any student with a problem or the intitative of learning about culture and diversity.

Plans for the future included finding open space at the Harborside campus, more staff members, educational events, and facility upgrades. Based on the events that have taken place at the center so far, show that center is a great place to meet new people and to take issues or conflicts that you may have.

Students who don't attend class could be forced to repay Federal Aid !

Some colleges are cracking down on attendance in hopes to keep Financial Aid coming

By Julie Finley
Daily Mississippian (U. Mississippi)
U-Wire

Students who stopped attending classes last semester and receive federal financial aid may be asked to repay the money.

A new interpretation of the federal aid requires universities to prove that students who receive the aid are in fact attending class. This requirement has left many universities with a problem since professors and instructors are not required to take attendance.

The University of Mississippi has begun a process of going through a list of all students who receive federal financial aid then looking to see if they had a passing grade in any class. Students who either an F or an incomplete must then be checked by their instructors to determine the last day they attended class. Teachers who do not keep roll must use assignments or final exams to prove that the student has not “unofficially withdrawn.”

Director of Financial Aid Larry Ridgeway said roughly 100 students might have to pay money back. Financial aid is distributed through the university at the beginning of the semester, and students who are not going to class will be asked to pay it back, Ridgeway said.

The university is subject to audit for all federal aid. A student must have “unofficially withdrawn” from all of his classes before they will be asked to pay money back. As long as one professor or instructor can prove that a student attended class or took the final exam he meets the requirements.

The provost's office has asked the deans to address the matter with their faculty and develop a way to handle the problems this year and prevent it in the future. “It's going to mean having our faculty and instructors do a better job of keeping track of when students are attending,” Associate Provost Maurice Eftink said.

Dean of Liberal Arts Glenn Hopkins said the matter was discussed with the department chairs at their regular Curriculum and Policy meeting, but no other steps have been made. He said the departments which have large classes are looking into ways of keeping better roll. “I'm hoping there won't be any problems; we will monitor the progress and see if it meets the university's requirements,” Hopkins said.

Mississippi State University is using the same process to solve the problem at their school. Bruce Crane, director of financial aid at State, said about 60 of approximately 16,000 students are affected there.

“Relatively few students are impacted, but if you are one of them it is a huge deal,” he said. “The message the feds are trying to deliver is that students have an obligation and they must live up to that obligation.”

Employment Tip of the Week - Brought to you by Employment Review and BestJobsUSA.com

Gender doesn't seem to matter anymore when it comes to jewelry. However, when going on a job interview, men and women alike, need to be cautious about what kinds of pieces to wear. In most instances, men should leave their earrings at home, while women should wear simple, non-distracting ones. With regard to other accessories, such as, bracelets, rings or necklaces/chains, remember you're going for a job interview, not clubbing.

Before going on an interview make sure you know why you're actually going to a particular company. Remember, there's nothing wrong with getting a job just to pay your bills, but if you're applying for a position to start your career, it's best you have a good idea what you're seeking from the job and the company. Here are some “don'ts” when interviewing:

- * When a hiring manager asks, “What are you looking for in a job?” Don't reply, “Something to pay my bills.”
- * When asked, “What made you interested in this company?” Don't reply, “I just thought it might be fun to work here.”
- * When asked, “What skills do you have to offer?” Don't reply, “I know how to use AOL.”
- * When asked, “Do you have any questions for me?” Don't let the first question you ask be, “What does the job pay?”

Girl Scout Troops Get Ready for Annual Cookie Sale

The annual cookie sale is an event that works in tow ways. "It raises funds for an organization that supports girls with fun, informal learning activities while cultivating values, social conscience and self-esteem," states Nancy Armstrong of North Kingstown, chair of the 2001 Girl Scout Cookie Sale in the Rhode Island area. "It also teaches important life skills such as goal setting, money management and teamwork."

All proceeds support local Girl Scout programs. A portion of each sale goes to troops where the girls can make decisions about how it is spent. Individual girls may earn credit toward their summer camp fees or to attend national and international Girl Scout program events. The volunteer Board of Directors of Girl Scouts of Rhode Island, Inc., budgets the remaining proceeds to provide Girl Scouting in the Rhode Island area including nearby communities in Massachusetts and Connecticut.

This year's local cookie sale service project is "Friends from the Forest" to provide stuffed animals to help comfort children who are victims and seek care at the Sexual Assault & Trauma Recourse Center of Rhode Island. Customers may also buy boxes of cookies for Girl Scouts to deliver to a local food bank through the national Gift of Sharing Community Service Project.

For $3 a box, the same price as last year, customers can enjoy Thin Mints, Do-so-dos (peanut butter crèmes), Tagalongs (peanut butter patties), Samoas, Trefoils, Lemon Drop, and reduced-fat Apple Cinnamon. The new cookie this year is Aloha Chips with Macadamia Nuts.

People who are not contacted by a Girl Scout may order cookies at 331-4500, ext. 0. These orders will be credited to the local troop that delivers the order.

Governor's Commission On Disabilities Offers Fellowships

The Governor's commission on Disabilities will be awarding two fellowships of $2,000 to students enrolled in a Rhode Island college or university. Each fellow is required to perform 240 hours of community service at the Commission's Office during the semester. The Commission urges college students: (1) with disabilities, (2) from minority groups, and (3) those enrolled in a course of study in education or human services for persons with disabilities to apply.

The "Mary Brennan Fellow" assists in scheduling mediation sessions to resolve disability discrimination complaints and providing information regarding federal and state disability laws to business owners, employers and persons with disabilities. The "Eduardo J. Schroeder Fellow" in the spring, tracks legislation, edits a weekly news bulletin and assists in the development of legislation impact statements for the Governor and General Assembly.

For more information, or to apply a for a fellowship or and internship, contact Terry Carr at the Governor's Commission Disabilities at (401) 462-0100 (voice) (toy), 462-0106 (toy), 462-0106 (fax ) or emaildisabilities@gcd.state.state.ri. Applications must be delivered to the commission by Friday 19, January 2001.

Dean Addison Posses a Strong Open Door Policy

Addison has faced a few challenges since he came to J & W this past June. He did say, however that he looks at the things that he faces here not as challenges, but more as opportunities. He wants to get the message out that it's "Not business as usual - there's someone new in charge". He wants to keep the expectations for both himself, and the students up at a high level. He sees the need for the University to be up-to-date in technology, as well as having a personal challenge to get to know Providence, J & W and the students better. He would like to be able to be in closer contact with student conduct departments on other J & W campuses. He thinks that this will provide even more information pertaining to his job, that will help not only him, but other Deans of discipline as well.

When I mentioned "Vision 2006", J & W's way of planning for the future, Dean Addison could not praise it enough. He mentioned some key points that he feels are quite valuable, including diversity, alumni presence in the university, scholarship monies being awarded. He also mentioned that Vision 2006 is different from 2001 because, not only is this one a year longer, it is also more consciences.

Then, we got onto the part that every student wonders about...what is the easiest and hardest parts of the job that Dean Addison performs? He felt that the easiest part of his job was to get to know the students of J & W - as much as he can. He said that the hardest part of his job was speaking to parents about why their son or daughter has been suspended from college.

In a closing note, Dean Addison said that he would like to extend the invitation to all J & W students to come up to the third floor of the CBCSI and say hello. The Dean would like to not only be known as the "Dean of Students" but also as a "student advocate" for the attendants of J & W, to be able to help with new ideas, thoughts and anything else. So, next time you are in the Citizen's Bank center, whether to pick up a commuter sticker, or for a club meeting, take a quick trip up to the third floor. You won't be sorry you did!

Girl Scout Chocolate Mint Cheesecake

Crust Ingredients:

1-cup Girl Scout Thin Mint cookie crumbs (crumble in a blender, a few cookies at a time)
1/4 cup granulated sugar
3 tablespoons butter, softened

Filling Ingredients: 2 lbs. Cream cheese, softened

1 cup granulated sugar
5 eggs

1 tsp. Peppermint extract
1-cup heavy cream

1/2 cup chopped Girl Scout Thin Mint cookies
1/2 cup chopped Andes candies

Topping Ingredients:

1 cup semi-sweet chocolate pieces
1/2 cup heavy cream

Pan: 10-inch spring form pan

Crust: In a medium-sized bowl, combine the Girl Scout Thin Mint cookie crumbs, sugar, and butter. Blend well with fingers. Press onto the bottom of a well-buttered spring form pan. Chill in the freezer or refrigerator for about 30 minutes.

Filling: In a large bowl, beat the cream cheese until smooth and whipped. Add sugar. Mix. Add eggs one at a time, beating well after each addition. Add peppermint extract and heavy cream, blend until smooth and creamy. Stir in candies and cookies. Pour mixture into the chilled pan. Place the pan inside a larger pan containing one inch of water and bake in a preheated 325-degree oven for 1-1/2 hours. Turn oven off, open door; leave cheesecake in oven 1/2 hour. Remove and cool completely (refrigerate overnight).

Topping: In a small saucepan, place whipping cream and semi-sweet chocolate pieces. Heat oven medium heat until chips are melted. Stir frequently. Remove from heat after it just comes to a boil. Let cool 1/2 hour. Pour over cooled cheesecake. Refrigerate.

Refrigerate.

Super Samoa Surprise

Ingredients:

1 box of Girl Scout Samoans cookies
2 boxes of coconut cream pudding; Instant or cooked

3/4 cup flaked, sweetened coconut
1 oz. Bittersweet chocolate

1 tsp. Butter
1 tsp. Cream

3-1/2 cups milk

To make the crust: Break up the Girl Scout Samoa cookies (14 cookies) into a food processor. Process until the cookies are evenly crumbled. Press into a 10-inch pie plate. Refrigerate for an hour or more.

To make the filling:

Make the pudding using the directions for pie filling on the box. If it is cooked pudding, let cool until warm instead of hot, stirring every five or 10 minutes to avoid leaving a "skin" on the pudding. When it has cooled sufficiently, pour it into the chilled piecrust. If it is instant pudding, you may pour it directly into the chilled pie after mixing.

To make the topping:

Heat the oven to 325-degrees. Spread the coconut flakes on a cookie sheet and place in the oven. Stir the coconut every couple minutes until it is evenly browned. This should take about 10 minutes or less. Sprinkle the toasted coconut on top of the filling in the crust and refrigerate while you make the chocolate drizzle.

To make the chocolate drizzle:

Place the chocolate in a microwave proof dish. Microwave at half power for one minute. Add the butter and microwave, again, at half power for another 30 to 60 seconds, stirring to mix the melted chocolate. Continue microwaving and stirring until the chocolate is completely melted and mixed with the butter. Add the cream and mix well. Drizzle over the toasted coconut or put in a decorating bag and pipe on in any design you wish. Refrigerate for three hours or overnight.

MANY PLANS, MANY ACCOMPLISHMENTS AS 2000 ENDS

Larry Friedman International Center for Entrepreneurship School of Global Management

The year 2000 has been fantastic! The Center has expanded, more students are attending, more programs and learning opportunities have been created and more are underway for the future.

Just a few highlights:

We have raised more than $200,000 in support for expanding our training of new entrepreneurs around the state.

We have doubled our capacity in the Small Business Incubator where students create and grow new business.

We led our second annual summer Entrepreneurship in Eastern Europe program into a new country - Slovakia.

We helped open the First Night Providence store in the Arcade.

We began a student exchange program with Budapest University that brought two of their students to Johnson & Wales in September 2000.

In the Year 2001

In the year 2001, we will continue to grow and nurture this exciting program. We are working on expanding our fundraising for the Center, finalizing plans to open a new Center facility in September, 2001, adding a Summer Work Abroad Program (SWAP) in Mexico, conducting our third summer Entrepreneurship in Eastern Europe with addition of Warsaw, Poland (a total of five countries!), expand our Micro Enterprise Program by opening four new satellites centers, presents two "Meet the Entrepreneurs" receptions, and develop a Test Kitchen for our Food Service Entrepreneurships students.

To All Campus Residents:

I would like to thank each of you for the gracious donations that you have made to the Dormitory Clothing and Supply Drives. The people of our shared Providence community also appreciate your support in helping to make the lives of others less challenging. #### Metcalf Fellowships available to college students for travel, internships, public service projects

Are you a college sophomore or junior with a desire to study music in Mozart's birthplace of Salzburg, Austria, to research Ukrainian culture for a historically accurate novel, or to rebuild homes for low-income families in Appalachia?

Rhode Island Restaurant
Tour
Cherrystones

Cherie L., David H., Brian K.

Winter, Spring, Fall or Summer, this week's restaurant has a view for all seasons. We just hopped in the car and drove to the end of Warwick Avenue and right into Oakland Beach. There we found Cherrystones, a quaint little restaurant once home to Rhode Islands Governor in the late 1800s. Its atmosphere was very friendly and family-like. The staff was well dressed and professional. Its lunch menu was full of succulent seafood dishes for everyone.

We were first greeted by a large tank full of lobsters then, we were promptly seated at a table that gave us a beautiful waterfront view, where we could see for miles. Our waitress then came over and asked us for our drink orders and shared the specials with us. We placed an order for our drinks. And we ordered Potato Skins and Crab Stuffed Mushrooms as appetizers. As we waited for the appetizers to arrive we read over the lunch menu, which was quite simple and easy to read. Our server then returned with our drinks and took our entrée orders. By this time our appetizers had arrived. The Potato Skins were excellent, but just a touch under-seasoned. The Stuffed Mushrooms had a sweet flavor that was irresistible.

For a restaurant that focuses on seafood, their menu prices were very reasonable and their portion sizes were perfect. For lunch, Brian indulged in one of the day's specials, Roast Prime Rib served with mashed potatoes and freshly sautéed green beans. It was huge, extremely delicious, and served perfectly cooked. David also enjoyed one of the day's specials, a Lobster Roll, Clam Cakes, and Clam Chowder. For those who don't know what a lobster roll is, it is basically a cold lobster salad sandwich. The selection was quite tasty and accompanied by the chowder and cakes, it was a very filling meal. These particular Clam Cakes were voted Readers Choice by RI Monthly. Cherie then topped off their seafood tasting by enjoying a well-portioned plate of Fish and Chips, served with coleslaw and tartar sauce. The fish had a thick cake like crust around it, making the meal filling, but not filling enough to avoid dessert. Key Lime Pie, Death by Chocolate, and Carrot Cake were our top picks. All of the desserts were homemade and could be seen in their dessert case just outside the dining room. All three desserts were delicious and Cherie still wishes she had the room to try there overstuffed Apple Pie. There must have been a bushel of apples in that pie.

Overall, Cherrystones was an excellent choice for lunch. Its staff and view topped off the experience by providing us with an atmosphere that made it easy to relax and talk. There were never any worries, our water glasses were always full, our server always smiling, and our bank account is still in the positive. And, of course, the restrooms were spotless. We will definitely be revisiting Cherrystones in the warmer months. So until next time, when we take you to another local hotspot in Rhode Island,

Happy Dining!

Lena Paine
Book Review

Lena's Library
Featuring: Men are
From Mars Women
are From Venus
By: John Gray, Ph.D.

If you ever wanted to make a relationship last a lifetime this book is all the help you need.

The book covers such topics as: how to avoid arguments; keeping the magic of love alive; communicating different feelings; how to ask for support and discovering the different emotional needs for each person.

Before you start learning how to fix things, you must learn the differences in the way males and females behave. This will help you to relate to what the other person is thinking, feeling and going through. Knowing this will help you to understand the problems that you may be faced with. You will start to understand why he/she does and says things. Once you know about the opposite sex, the next step is to learn about yourself. It is important that you know why you do the things you do. More than likely, you will see a little bit of yourself in the book. You start to realize that there is always a way of improving yourself.

The book tells you how to go about changing, a little at a time. Do not expect the change to occur overnight. Taking small steps to make your happiness last will only make your life happier. I have never read a book that has all the answers divided into chapters. I would recommend this book to everyone. It will help you to grow and help you relate to people better.

Coffee Talks a Huge Success

By - Mike Bosco, Speaker of the Senate

During the first part of the Second Trimester, the Student Government Association hosted a series of "Coffee Talks," where Senators and students sat down over a cup of coffee and pastry to discuss different issues and departments on campus. One hot topic was the Safety & Security Office, specifically, Professional Security Services (PSS). PSS is an outsourced security firm that handles the overnight security at the University Residence Halls. Residents in the past have been vocal about not feeling safe in their halls overnight due to poor training and inexperienced Security Officers. Steps have already been taken toward resolving this issue at some facilities, by removing PSS and replacing them with Johnson & Wales Security Officers. Many solutions came out of the "Coffee Talks," including videotaping student responses around campus to questions about different areas of the University. So, if you see a camera coming and you hear the word, "ACTION," be honest about what you feel.

National Highway Traffic Safety Administration's (NHTSA) Rollover Risks...

Star Rating of Vehicles

Courtesy of MSNBC News

On Tuesday, January 9 the federal government released the first rating of vehicles in rollover risk. This was done to allow consumers to demand safer sport utilities and cars. The results were accurate and help in the buying process.

Transportation Secretary Rodney Slater said the five-star rating system will help consumers "choose a safe vehicle for themselves and their family." The NHTSA said that in 1979 just 33 percent of vehicles achieved a four or five star rating. By 1997, 85 percent had received four or five stars.

The agency had rated vehicles as data has become available. Its initial list contains 50 and will be expanded in the coming months. The Honda Accord received five stars and was the only one to achieve this out of the first test. All other passenger cars received four stars. Most of the SUVs and pickup trucks tested marked two or three stars, which represents high risk. The Chevrolet Blazer and GMC Jimmy/Envoy tallied in with one star.

The ratings come as industry giant Ford pledged to improve its SUVs after defective Firestone tires were linked to about 140 deaths when drivers lost control of their Ford vehicles. The Ford Explorer 4x4 SUV, the target of dozens of lawsuits as a result of tire-related accidents, received a two star rating.

The NHTSA said it compiled the ratings because rollover crashes are one of the deadliest types of accidents. More than 10,000 people die every year in rollover crashes, according to the NHTSA. And more than 60 percent of the SUV occupants killed in 1999 died in crashes when their vehicles rolled over, compared to 23 percent for car occupants.

"Your best chance of surviving a rollover is by buckling up," said Bailey.

The NHTSA ranking estimates the risk of rollover, which usually occurs when a vehicle runs off the road and is tripped by a curb, ditch or soft soil. The ratings do not predict the likelihood of that crash.

The risk is estimated based on the vehicle's center of gravity and how wide apart the tires are. Those factors in turn determine how "top-heavy" the vehicle is. The more top-heavy, the more likely it is to roll over.

Here's the rollover risk associated with each ranking"

- * Five Stars: less than 10 percent
- * Four Stars: between 10 percent and 20 percent
- * Three Stars: between 20 percent and 30 percent
- * Two Stars: between 30 percent and 40 percent
- * One Star: greater than 40 percent

The Public says "Farewell" to some of the Retail Industry Leaders

Bradlees, Ann & Hope, Montgomery Ward, and Sears and Roebuck Co. close stores and create cut backs

By - Melanie Anton

Bradlees, Ann & Hope, Montgomery Ward, and Sears, Roebuck and Co. are just a few of the retail stores which have been in the news recently due to store closings. Competition from other national chains, the effects of a poor holiday season sales, and the unstable economy are just a few of the causes of this major loss in retail giants.

Braintree-based Bradlees had cut costs, reduced debt, and upgraded distribution, but such moves couldn't offset the impact of too many other factors. In September, Bradlees asked its banker to explore whether larger chains might be interested in buying the company but as Bradlees chief executive Peter Thorne said "nobody wanted the whole package."

Rhode Island based Ann & Hope, a pioneer of discount retailing, said it is succumbing to competition from the very industry it revolutionized. Beat up over the years by rival, nationwide discounters and declining sales, the Cumberland retailer is closing its four stores in Massachusetts located in Seekonk, Danvers, North Dartmouth, and Watertown, and dramatically scaling back its Warwick and Cumberland stores. The Rhode Island stores will reopen as small, off-price outlet shops. The closings, which will be completed by May 1, end Ann & Hope's nearly 50-year reign as the king of local discount retailing.

Montgomery Ward will also be closing its doors, or rather 250 stores nationwide. The country's first catalog retailer said Thursday it will close up shop after 128 years in business and numerous attempts to reinvent itself. Well-known retailer Sears, Roebuck, and Co. also announced plans to close 89 underperforming stores amid a tightening outlook for retailers that caused its sales to fall last month. The move will cost about 2,400 Sears employees their jobs. Just four of its 860 full-line department stores will be affected. They include Voorhees, N.J., Scottsdale, Ariz., Owings Mills, Md., and Homestead, Fla. "Like other retailers, general industry softness and difficult weather conditions dampened our holiday season sales," said Alan Lacy, Sears' new chairman and chief executive officer.

Farewell to these retail stores that have been major forerunners to the store of today. In the upcoming months be watching for more retail closings and announcements.

Top 5 trends for 2001

By - Jena Naffa

the top five current trends of the New Year 2001 might help you.

Top of the charts consists of canary brights from the summer giving way to gold fever, which shows up in shimmering eye shadow and uptown highlights. For the winter, gold looks great against amber reds, caramel to coffee browns, and a neutral or emblazed blondes. "Hippie Chic?" The hair to wear with this look is long, almost every hairdresser predicts a new, longer length. Hair extension pieces give you the look fast and it looks smart and sophisticated.

Well-groomed, cared-for hair comes from the comeback of the hot roller sets. While the great blush out will become the new hair-dressing art. For example, spiral set hair and then comb through gently from underneath only.

Texture is always important but this season, its precision razor cutting that's at its best. For short hair, it adds mobility; for long locks, perimeter is more precise.

Thus far, in the age of individualism, it's a given that short hair is still dominant. Romantic and beautifully rounded bobs with layers, textured look that rock legends. Also, polished cuts make it clear that you're a woman who won't allow to be seen in anything that looks

What to Wear this Winter

By- Jennefer Camilo

Wondering what extras you need to add to your fall wardrobe in order to keep up to date this winter?

How about adding a new color to you wardrobe. Purple is a hot color to consider. Purple key-hole sweaters or a knit purse will give you an instant update. Conduroy pants are another must-have and will remain in style for the months to come.

Fur also continues to be an attractive accent of the moment. A fur scarf or a hat like the Crusher from Kangol can keep you looking cool this cold winter.

The last must-have item you may want to consider are textured tights. These too are frequently seen. They have a nice look and you feel cozy wearing them in the cold winter mornings.

The Piercing Path Where will your next piercing be?

By - Jacqueline Manusi

Piercings have become a teenage trend within the last 10 years. If it's not connected to some major organ in your body, you can basically pierce it. Almost 40 percent of teens, pre-teens and even others have at least one (besides the ear). So what's so great about having at least a 14-gauge piece of stainless steel protruding from your body? Mostly, for the look. Sometimes to enhance intimidation. For instance, a very painful piercing would demonstrate courage or strength. At least, this would be what some would think or what you would want them to think. There are other piercings that people get done for sexual pleasure, but what about fashion? Fashion fits into culture, and piercing fits into fashion, to an extent. Whether it's the showing of your belly ring with a belly shirt or sticking out your tongue to show off a new tongue ring. Certain piercings, such as the tongue ring, have not been intended to be looked at as an accessory to the human body, but it has evolved that way. Since it's become popular fairly recently, most parents do not approve. And if it's not your parents, it might be the pain or the six-week to one-year time period that most piercings take to heal (not including the possibility of infections.) So why are piercings currently fashionable? They're eye-catching ability, for one, and then also the "trickle across" theory, meaning everyone imitates it.

The Leaders of the Alternative Nation Resign: Farewell to the Smashing Pumpkins

By - Wendy Weiss

The industry knew it was coming, the fans knew it was coming, and the band definitely knew it was coming... but no one was truly prepared for the Smashing Pumpkins final performance, especially the band's songwriter, lead vocalist, and guitarist Billy Corgan.

On December 2nd, Cabaret Metro in Chicago, where the Pumpkins officially debuted on October 5th 1988, opened its doors to more than a thousand fans who had come to bid the legendary emotional band farewell. They were graced with a thirty-five song set lasting four hours, a nine song set of acoustic rhythms, a half hour long encore, and special guest appearances including the punk rock group the Frogs, Rick Nielsen from Cheap Trick, and William Corgan who joined his son on the guitar riffs for "For Martha," Billy's memorial hymn to his late mother. Was there a dry eye in the place? Doubtful.

In a preshow interview Corgan declared in a calm edginess, "I feel pretty comfortable walking away from these songs." However, the performance proved otherwise. The room was saturated with the emotions being pumped out of every word and sound. Corgan fought with himself to leave the stage for the last time. "Let's rock one more time," he screams in conclusion. "Not for you, because you get it. Let's rock one more time for all those people who don't get it, who don't understand that music overcomes all this f***ing bulls**t!!!" Corgan remained on stage after the rest of the band bid their farewells to shake hands and share the passion with fans. As his bald head glistened with an ocean of sweat and tears, he took his final bow... a moment of love, sorrow, celebration, mourning, and "everything the band is- the happiness, the sadness, all of the polar opposites of the heart", said Jimmy Chamberlin, Smashing Pumpkins drummer.

Play the Music....

By - Kelly Jones

* If adrenaline had a sound At The Drive In would supply the soundtrack. This El Paso, Texas quintet has been creating rock and roll from day one, and now with their new release "Relationship Of Command"(Grand Royal), commercial acceptance is finally occurring. Their sound is raw, passionate, and extremely energetic. The whole album possesses a powerful angst with lyrics of hidden truth obscured deeply behind the thrashing sounds of rock. The single "one arm scissor" has sent their transmission towards stardom with a performance on David Letterman's "Late Show"(visit http://www.cbs.com/latenight/lateshow/webcast/drive\_in.shtml to download the performance). On "Mannequin Republic" "they call it a wasteland, labor concentrated, in this sheepless chapel" an encounter of commercial flying in a world of clones where day after day is the same and slowly wrinkles appear before your face and you are looking at yourself in a burial ground. At The Drive In is always touring! Currently they are in Europe and Japan until the end of February. Catch them if you can, they will blow your mind.

* Coldplay? That sounds like a virus. If it was, I would be trying to catch it. Coldplay is a fairly fetal band from the UK. They have been often compared to the likes of Jeff Buckley, Radiohead, and Travis. "Parachutes" is their latest release and their single "Yellow" has been plastered all over mtv2. Coldplay's sound is a mellow and eerie one that is complemented perfectly by beautiful vocals (hence the radiohead comparison). Coldplay is definitely on a different level lyrically than Thom Yorke and Radiohead. Their songs are short and sweet love songs with simple vocabulary that make perfect British Pop. The foursome got together and recorded their first tracks in 1998 and have out about six albums including Parachutes, but three or four of them are just singles and outtakes. Coldplay will be in New York at Irving Plaza on February 15th and in Boston at Paradise on the 17th. Either one of these shows would be a perfect valentine.

The Love Story of Kara and Jake WILL TRUE LOVE PREVAIL IN THE END?

BY - JESSE PHILLIPS

"I can't keep having this same fight with you, Jake," she shouted into the phone. She knew Jake loved her, but ever since he had moved two hours away, he hadn't been showing it as much. It had been almost two months since he had moved to accept a promotion. Kara couldn't move with him, she still had a year of college left to finish. When Jake left he seemed so enthusiastic about staying together, he didn't want to throw away a two year relationship. He hadn't ever been overly expressive even when he lived close by, but now that he couldn't express his feelings with his kisses and the way he looked into her eyes, Kara was finding it hard to cope.

"I don't know what you want from me, what do you want me to do?!"

"All I want is some affection. I know you're not really the phone type, but I just want to know you're thinking about me. You always used to tell me I was beautiful, and you'd go on about how happy I made you. You never say that stuff anymore, and it's important for me to hear that now more than ever. I'm not asking a lot, just a one line e-mail that says 'I miss you', or a call to say 'I love you', that's all I need. I know you love me, but sometimes I need to hear it." Kara had already explained this to him several times, yet nothing had changed.

"I'll try to be better. I miss you." Jake said unconvincedly.

"Now you're just saying it cause you feel guilty," Kara said, exasperated.

"No, I really do miss you, I'm just not very good at expressing that stuff."

"That's what you always tell me and I'm sick of hearing it Jake. We keep talking about this and you say you'll change but you don't. I can't keep rehashing it. Things just aren't working out long distance."

"What are you saying?" Jake asked wearily.

"I'm saying it's over, Jake."

"Is that really what you want? I can work on it, really, Kara, we shouldn't give up."

"No Jake, you've had way too many opportunities to change, and you haven't, I can't believe you now." It broke Kara's heart to say it, but she truly believed things just weren't working out. She couldn't go on just knowing he loved her, she had to see him express it.

"Well, I wish you didn't feel that way, but if it's what you want..." Jake trailed off, obviously blindsided by Kara's decision.

"It's not what I want, but it's the way it has to be." Kara had to get off the phone before she broke down. "I have to go Jake, I'll send you your stuff back," she blurted and hung up the phone.

She immediately grabbed her keys and headed to her friend Abby's house. As she walked out the door she was bombarded with huge, puffy, white flakes of snow. In fact, the entire city was covered in white. She hopped in her little red sports car and started down her street. She tried to control her sobs, as it was difficult to see through tears. As she came to the stop sign right in front of Abby's house she stepped on the brakes and felt them lock. With everything else that was going on in her head she had trouble thinking of what to do in this type of situation. She jerked her steering wheel, unsure of exactly what that would do. She skidded past the stop sign into the middle of the intersection, where she immediately smashed into a large white cargo van.

The sound of the collision was like nails on a chalkboard. She felt glass shower down on her face and shooting pain down her spine. Then everything went blank and all her senses picked up were some faded noises. She heard muted sirens and upset voices swirling around her like a gust of icy cold wind. Soon, she opened her eyes and saw a blurry version of Jake.

"She's awake," he said over her. She looked in the direction he was talking to see her mother getting out of her chair and approaching the bed she was lying in. She then realized she was in a hospital room, felt various pains throughout her body.

"How are you doing sweetie?" Her mother asked and took her hand.

"What happened?" she murmured, still disoriented.

"You were in a car accident, but you're going to be ok," her mother answered.

"Why are you here?" she asked in Jake's general direction.

"I'll leave you two alone for a little while," her mom said and quickly exited.

"Kara, when I heard you had been in an accident, I panicked. I wasn't told what condition you were in, so I rushed here to see you. I was afraid it might be the last time I saw the love of my life. I realize things between us weren't ideal, but I can't live without you. Hearing you say you wanted to end things hurt me so much, but having to imagine what this world would be like without you in it was a thousand times worse. Now that I know you're going to be ok, I have to ask you to give me another chance. I know I've told you too many times that I would change, but this time I truly mean it. I don't know how to live without you. Kara, I want you to be my wife." He said it all so quickly he was out of breath and she was left trying to sort out all he had said.

It was too much to take in, she had just been through two traumatic experiences, one emotional and one physical. Now she was being presented with a marriage proposal. She had loved Jake for two years, and breaking things off with him was not what she wanted to do, but rather what she felt she had to do. Now he was standing before her asking her to spend the rest of her life with him. As she looked into his eyes, she saw fear. He was genuinely afraid of losing her, she could sense it.

"Jake, you know I love you, and I always will. I would love to be your wife."

"You make me so happy, Kara. I love you," he said as he took her hand and kissed it gently. "You're so amazing," he whispered and laid his head down next to hers.

News in Latino music - Puerto Rock

By - Rosaura Suarez

This new artist has given hip-hop some serious Latin flavor. Like Fat Joe and the late Big Pun before him, Puerto Rock puts Latinos back in the mix of the hip-hop experience.

Jimmy Perez (Puerto Rock) grew up in the projects on 123rd street in El Barrio. With his rap music, Puerto Rock wants to chronicle his life in the projects, on the streets and in prison. With his gravelly voice, in-your-face lyrics and sharp attitude, the young recording artist has given hip-hop some serious Latin flavor and is determined to put his El Barrio brand of rapping on the map. Drawing his energy from his life on the streets and nearly seven years in jail.

He spent up to 15 exhaustive hours at a time in the studio to record his new CD "Bang Out," due out soon on Sony's Epic Records. He can also be seen in Budweiser's "Wass Up" commercials and on "La Bomba," a weekly talk show. He's also had three movie offers, but he's a cautious businessman who considers each offer carefully before making a move.

Puerto Rock says that "Latinos, we're just as creative and talented as any black or white rappers," he said. "We waited our turn and we're making a statement. Look out for Puerto Rock."

By - Eva Pena

According to a recent study released by the Association of Hispanic Advertising Agencies, the Hispanic market has an estimated $458 billion in spending power.

This starts with students, among U.S. Hispanics 16 years of age and older, 38 percent are using the Internet on a regular basis. This study defined the typical Internet user as male around 28 years of age and unmarried. About half are Spanish-speaking language dominant. They also spend almost five-and-one-half hours per week online, with 71 percent using home computers. In addition, the typical user also watches 18 hours of TV per week - 50 percent of it in Spanish - and listens to 15 hours of radio, also in Spanish, per week.

And from another source, idiom Technologies notes that 43 percent of today's Web user's are non-English speaking; and over the next few years, Internet use is expected to grow by 123 percent in Latin America.

Evaluate what is going on with a child or loved one. Be direct with a friend. Tonight: make an important meeting.

TAURUS April 20-May 20)

***** Aim for what you want with another. Gather the "troops" if need be. Entertain a change of direction. A loved one clears out a financial problem. You need to trust this person. GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

*** Your authority could be tested. Don't feel insecure and accept mistakes. Your ability to move forward separates you from others. Your sense of humor comes out with a child. Learn from him/her that, by using your imagination, you can come up with solutions. Tonight: Burn the midnight oil.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

**** Your ability to detach remains instrumental. Don't push another away. Listen to their opinions. Brainstorming energizes others as well as you. Creativity soars once everyone lets go. A family member might surprise you. Tonight: Let your mind wander, but stay close to home.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

***** Review a decision carefully. Don't let a momentary problem get to you. You'll breeze through once you think it out. Your incredible resourcefulness breaks through problems and opens doors. Nothing is impossible. "Visualize and create" needs to be your motto. Tonight: With a special friend.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

*** You need others to carry the weight right now. They want to assume responsibility, so let them. A boss might be out of sorts. See work from the perspective of a moneymaking business. Tonight: of to the gym.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

****Emphasize work and getting the job done. Your ability to get around an obstacle helps you define your priorities. Carefully review a decision. Touch your work and life with creativity and more humor. Call a loved one and schedule lunch. This person appreciates your extra attention. Tonight: Run errands on the way home.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

****You count on someone who unfortunately lets you down. Realize that there might be more than one way to realize your goal. Allow yourself to work independently. You gain security and, as a result, develop a greater sense of self-worth. Give 100 percent. Tonight: Be enthusiastic about playing.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

**** You build strong foundations and are sure of what you want. Don't undermine yourself or a project because of another's attitude or judgment. Forge your path, knowing that you are capable of unusually creative thinking. You gain because of a willingness to risk and break with convention. Tonight: happy at home.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

****Keep communication flourishing. You might not be sure about which way to go with a key project. Survey your immediate circle to get ideas. Allowing more energy in and distancing yourself from limited thinking makes room for new possibilities. Teamwork enhances a project. Tonight: out and about.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

****You make finances the basis of a decision. Don't worry about another so much. A loved one might need to retreat so he can center. Refuse to take his actions personally. Your perspective helps open new doors. Sign up for that special trip or course. Refresh your mind. Tonight: Treat yourself.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

****Others enjoy you and how you approach a difficult situation. Don't limit yourself just because someone has an attitude. Separate your personal and professional lives. Understand that another supports you in whatever choices you make. Work closely with this person. Tonight: Whatever makes you smile.

Slow and Steady Wins the Online College Shopping Race

The virtue of providing excellent customer service and product offerings has recently been demonstrated by the demise of college textbook companies that resorted to marketing gimmicks.

Site traffic at major Internet online retailers of textbooks has plummeted from January to August of this year, according to PC Data, a leading provider of web traffic measurement and analysis. The decline ranges from a 1.19 percent drop at efollet.com to a 70.78 percent drop at textbooks.com.

At the same time, sites such as StudentMarket.com have continued to excel by focusing on customer service, selection, and convenience, a philosophy unmatched by companies that have focused too much on marketing. Some online textbook sellers have found trouble just keeping their doors open.

Big Words, Inc. filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection on November 1, and Varsity Group, Inc., the parent company of VarsityBooks.com, has watched its stock price drop from a high of 13.125 dollars per share to a low of 0.0625 dollars on December 20, calling their long-term solvency into question.

In sharp contrast to the roller coaster ride of these rapid rise-and-fall companies is the stable presence provided by privately-held, and efficiently-run, StudentMarket.com.

"When we started in 1995, we made a decision to grow this company organically," said Oren Milgram, director of student affairs. "From the beginning, our focus has been on consistently delivering value in a stable way."

According to PC Data, StudentMarket.com is the eight most visited college site as of July 2000. The company has steadily expanded its offerings over the last five years. College students can now do all of their college shopping online, from buying a poof chair, to buying art supplies.

StudentMarket.com recently upgraded its online textbook site, allowing students to continue to take advantage of the convenience and low prices of online shopping, with the security that comes from dealing with a company that can support their needs.

"We made a decision early on to consistently provide value by focusing on providing access to quality products and services, without wasting tens of millions of dollars on advertising expenses. We grow at the pace of business, and no faster."

Hockey Games Getting Bigger.....

Hockey Teams Looks for Fans in Attendance

By - John Parente

The games will soon get bigger and bigger, and hopefully, so will attendance at Schneider Arena, as the Johnson & Wales hockey team heads toward the home stretch of what could be an extremely memorable season.

After ripping Worcester State, 7-0, to begin the new year, the Wildcats find themselves in first place in the ultra-tough ECAC Northeast nearly half-way through only their fourth season of NCAA play. The win over the Lancers put JWU at 7-0-0 in league play, two points ahead of Tufts and Wentworth, which began 2001 with 6-0-0 marks.

"The numbers that the Wildcats have out up in their first 15 games have been impressive"

The 'Cats are also 10-4-1 overall, and played impressive hockey over the holiday break, when they were edged by Eastern Conference power Trinity, 4-2, and tied Division II St. Michael's of Vermont, 4-4. A couple of breaks and even those games may have been Wildcat wins.

But back to Worcester State. While the Wildcats were unable to solve goaltender Paul Sundeen in the first period (the Lancer goalie made a dozen saves), JWU exploded for five goals in the second period. Brandon Steven scored a pair of goals during the outbreak. Scott Graham opened the barrage with a score just before the 3:00 mark. After Stevens made it 2-0 at 8:36, Dan "Hi-O" Silva lit the lamp less than a minute later on nifty passes by Eric Rosenberg and Scott Feeney. Feeney made it 4-0 at 16:48, and when Captain Tory Jabo sent Stevens away for his second goal just 66 seconds later, the rout was on.

Senior Scott Jacob, meanwhile, was an impenetrable human storm door. Nothing got by the league's second-rated netminder, and his 30 saves included 13 in the decisive second period.

Steven Harris took a Matt O'Connor pass five minutes into the third period to make it six-zip, and ECAC rookie scoring leader Chris Thunman scored his 11th goal of the year to cap the scoring.

The numbers that the Wildcats have put up in their first 15 games have been impressive ones. Scott Jacob has a sensational, career-best 2.76 goals-against average and a save percentage of .924. Offensively, meanwhile, seven players are averaging at least a point a game. Thunman's 25 points and 15 assists lead the team, while Graham has a team-high 14 goals among his 24 points. Tory Jacob is next at 10-12-22, and his three assists put him over 150 points in his four-year NCAA career. Dave Accetturo, Derek Foster, Harris, and Saltzman each have 14 points. 20 Wildcats have at least one point, with 10 regular-season games left to play.

And while Coach Lou Izzi and his team have their sights set on smashing the 1998-99 season record of 14 wins, they're also looking to some rather large games over the next four weeks. On Sunday, January 21st, the 'Cats and Tufts play their contest for at least some control of the league summit. And though it's very, very early to tell, should JWU beat the Jumbos, you can mark down the weekend of February 17th and 18th to spend some time watching big-time hockey. On the 17th at Schneider, UMass-Dartmouth, which is running behind the current Big Three, makes its run at the 'Cats. Then, on the 18th, JWU travels to Wentworth. Sure, it's about a month away, but it's never too early to get prepped.

Array of Recognition Finds Women's Soccer team Without a Coach....

Coach Chris Guay leaves to Wildcats for new endeavors.

By - John Parente

After leading the Johnson & Wales women's soccer team to an abundance of historic firsts, coach Chris Guay has coached his last game for the Wildcats.

The popular and successful coach of the 'Cats is moving to Maryland. He's not only leaving Johnson & Wales behind, but he's leaving bachelorhood behind as well.

Guay plans to marry later this year, and, with future wife Nancy, will make their home in suburban Baltimore.

But that's not the only good news coming out of the Wildcat women's soccer office. Guay has been named Rhode Island women's sport Coach of the Year by Words Unlimited, the state organization of sportswriters and sportscasters.

That's still not all. The Wildcats were named the Rhode Island collegiate women's Team of the Year by Words Unlimited, and will be honored at the group's major awards banquet at the Radisson Airport Hotel on February 11th.

"We're all glad for Chris," said J & W Director of Athletics Tom Carmody, "Sure, we hate to see him go, but he's the happiest guy on campus right about now."

Still more news...Carmody also announced that Guay's right-hand man, assistant coach Luis Faria, has been promoted to head coach, and will take over the reigns of the Wildcat women next season.

"The two work so well together," said Carmody of Guay and Faria, who came to J & W three years ago and took the 'Cats from a 3-16 team to 18-2-2 and a Great Northeast Athletic Conference title last fall. "Luis will do a great job. He knows the game, he knows the league, he knows his players, and he was a major contributor to the program's success."

The Wildcats finished with the nation's second-longest unbeaten streak, an 18-game run between September 6th and November 1st, when they lost a narrow, 2-1 match at powerful Muhlenberg, in Allentown, Pennsylvania, in the first round of the NCAA national championship tournament.

The Words Unlimited Awards are a rarity for Division III teams. The Coach of the Year award has gone to the likes of former Providence College basketball coaches Dave Gavitt, Joe Mullaney and Rick Pitino. Past winners of the Team of the Year have included NCAA Division I Final Four and Elite Eight teams from PC and the University of Rhode Island, the Pawtucket Red Sox, and the Providence Bruins.

Walker, Gueye and Lowery Fighting for Conference Respect Johnson & Wales loses in closing seconds

By - John Parente

Rivier College head basketball coach Dave Morissette walked off the court at the Harborside RAC the other night raving about Johnson & Wales' men's hoop team.

"I don't want to be facing them on this floor in the playoffs," said Morissette, though his team had just beaten the 'Cats, 59-57, in a heart-stopper of a Great Northeast Athletic Conference contest.

It wasn't the first time for Morissette. Just last year, Rivier's Aaron Lopez nailed a lunging three-pointer at the buzzer to beat J & W. This year's matchup in Providence would end in a similar fashion, but Morissette says this year's edition of the Wildcats is a better bunch.

"They've got a lot of talent, and if they put it together come playoff time, they can come out of nowhere and give some teams an awful lot of trouble," said the Raider coach, whose team moved to 3-0 in league play with the win.

Indeed, Rivier had their hands full with the Wildcats. But JWU may have missed out on an upset win had it not been for a frigid second-half of floor shooting, some untimely difficulties at the foul line, and 29 turnovers in 40 minutes of play.

The Wildcats led by as many as 11, and enjoyed a 32-21 lead late in the first half, as Devin Lowery, one of the GNAC's emerging standouts, teamed with Mamadou Gueye and Tony Walker for 24 points in the first 15 minutes.

But Rivier gamely chipped away, ran off a 9-0 spurt to end the half, and left the floor trailing by a deuce, 32-30.

The teams played a nip-and-tucker in the second half, with seven ties over the last 20 minutes. Rivier didn't get its first lead until Rich Lecesse hit a three-pointer with under eight minutes to play to make it 47-45.

The Wildcats struggled back, and stayed within a couple until a Jeff Gustafson basket made it 57-54, Rivier, with 37 seconds to play.

Junior sharpshooter T. J. Ciolfi gave the Wildcats a huge lift, and made the game a dead heat at 57-57 when he nailed a three-bee from the West Hall parking lot. Rivier called time out and set their last play. And again, it was the speedy, 5-3 Lopez that stuck the dagger in the Wildcats' heart.

Accepting the inbound pass with 11 seconds to go, Lopez was a dribbling blur as he went the length of the court and drew a foul in the key with 2.5 ticks to play. The sophomore from Nashua, New Hampshire calmly dropped the freebies in, then watched J & W's desperation three-quarter-court shot bound harmlessly off the backboard.

Rivier's bench came up big in the win. Lopez had no floor baskets, finishing four-for-four from the line. Justin Harper, the second-leading scorer in the GNAC coming into the game, had only two points all night. And Dan Caruso, another of the Raider veterans, had but six. Reserve guard Leonid Gershgorin came off the bench to hit a big pair of threes in the first half. Jeff Perham scored eight, Paul Williams had a double-double with ten points and 13 rebounds, and 6-10 reserve Tad Hitt had eight points and eight rebounds.

Walker's 13 topped J & W. Matt Daignault, playing serious minutes for the first time at the point, had 11 points, while Lowery finished with ten points and nine rebounds in 26 minutes of play.

The Wildcats head to Emerson and Southern Vermont to complete a string of three straight games on the road this week. J & W is 2-8 overall and 1-2 in the GNAC.
