Apprentice seeks out next star at J&W
60 students seek out role on next seasons show

By Alexis Jungdahl
Assistant Editor-in-Chief

Could the next Donald Trump or Martha Stewart be right here on Johnson & Wales’s Providence Campus? On February 11th casting directors for both, The Apprentice with Donald Trump and Martha Stewart, held auditions for contestants on each show.

J&W was specially selected by casting directors because of its unique mix of culinary, hospitality, and business majors. The casting call was closed, allowing only students, alumni, faculty, and staff to present their best self in a short but intense interview.

More than sixty people, adorned in their best business wear and chef whites, showed up to audition for their chance at fame. A University ID, a recent photo, and a completed application was all that was required in order to sit down for an interview with the directors. To pass the waiting room, applicants read, chatted, watched remixes of “The Apprentice” on a big screen TV, or sat quietly as names were called to enter the private interview room. The press was not permitted to sit in on the interviews.

The casting directors had their eyes and ears open, looking for energetic, business-minded people with strong leadership skills. “Smart and savvy, not afraid to be themselves.” One casting director said quickly, before rushing away.

“Why not, it’s a shot. No guts, no glory,” Culinary Arts student Michelle Ledoux explained when asked why he decided to audition.

But with only 16 to 18 people being cast for each show and with the casting calls taking place across the country, the competition will be fierce. Applicants from the February interviews will find out the results during mid-March.

Although, a recent graduate Joe Herndon felt confident about his audition. He was concerned about the disadvantage students might have in the competition compared to those contestants already in the working world. “You watch the show, they don’t last very long,” Herndon said.

Community closes Black History Month

By ALEXIS JUNGHAHN
Assistant Editor-in-Chief

White table clothes covered with a spread of the foods, representing a good old fashioned, home cooked meal. Corn bread, macaroni and cheese, fried chicken, and roast potatoes marked the end of a successful Black History Month celebration at Johnson & Wales University. The closing ceremonies, which took place at 7pm in the Pepsi Forum, was the last event the University planned for February's annual Black History Month.

The Black History committee presented the last educational and festive event for the enjoyment of the Johnson & Wales community. Balla Tourekar, a local musician, set the atmosphere with songs on the Kora, a native African instrument. Posters and information about important issues facing African and African Americans, such as AIDs, politics, genocide, culture, and woman's issues were presented to raise awareness about current issues. At 7:30pm special guests, the Irving Street Repertory treated attendees to their drama, "The Pad of Black History.

Members of the school and local community enjoyed the food, music, and informational session. Ultimately the event offered students a chance to learn something more, however, its lack of audience was frustrating for everyone involved in its planning.

"I wish more people were here to experience it." Patricia Rollins-Trosclair, Director of the Multicultural Center, confided. Many fell students missed out on a chance to learn something important about their history, and are hopeful for a better turn out in the future.

One guest and member of the Providence community, Cindy Rollins, felt the event had a lot to offer attendees. "It would be nice if they offered more events like this outside the school community."

The closing ceremonies gave everyone a chance to look back at Black History Month and it's events, both nationally and right here on the J&W campus. While each offered attendees many different forms of education and entertainment, the events celebrated African Americans in the past, present, and future. Events such as guest speaker Jesse Jackson, proved very successful and had a large turn out.

Successful journalist shares experiences

* PROFESSOR PROFILE *

Dr. Marian Gagnon is an associate professor teaching full time in the Freshman Studies department. Not a stranger to J&W, she has been part of the community for 15 years.

She was first the Director of Public Relations of J&W, then after 10 years, decided to join the faculty of Arts & Sciences. She loved her job in Public Relations because she was always working with the media. However, she felt it was time for her to try something new.

"I decided I needed a new challenge, a new way to use my brain, so to speak. And because I love writing and literature, I decided I wanted to teach within the School of A&S."

Professor Gagnon was born and raised in Manchester, NH. Her father was a mill worker and her mother stayed at home to raise her children. Professor Gagnon being the second oldest. She attended New Hampshire College and received her associate's degree in Business. Then, she received her bachelor's degree in Journalism from Rhode Island University. She also has a Master's Degree in Teaching from J&W, and recently received her PhD in Media Studies--with a focus in the documentary genre--from the Union Institute & University in Cincinnati. The dissertation was a 30 minute document called "HERStory: The Founding Mothers of Johnson & Wales University."

Her initial reason for producing the documentary was to obtain her degree, but she soon found that she was deeply interested in the lives of these two women.

"I wondered what their stories were, what they were made of, what obstacles they had to overcome back in 1914." Without this documentary, the stories of Gertrude Johnson and Mary Wales may have been lost forever.

"As the writer, director and producer of this documentary...I am especially proud of this accomplishment. Proud because I saved a piece of history for the University, but especially proud that these two incredible women finally got the recognition they deserve."

"HERStory" has aired on PBS numerous times and a copy of the documentary is available in the Johnson & Wales library.

Professor Gagnon is also very interested in newswriting. She had worked in the industry for 15 years as a reporter for a Rhode Island newspaper, and a freelance writer in Maine. She says of her enjoyment from newswriting, "Maybe that's because of 15 years as a journalist, it's really in my blood. I have a lot of faith in the press, despite its flaws, and believe to the core of my being that the press is what keeps this country a true democracy."

Along with Introduction to Literary Genres and Advanced Comp, she also teaches Intro to Newswriting, and says, "It is my favorite subject to teach."

Professor Gagnon has taught many of the Herald's staff writers, and says the paper has improved over the last few years.

"I'm just happy that it publishes consistently and that it is fair and balanced and not always afraid to tackle the tough stories."

The future of Harborside

576 beds will be available July 06

By John Ortienzo
Editor-in-Chief

The University exclusively shared a portion of the master plan with The Herald. Harborside Village, a 144, four-bedroom, upper-classmen apartment area is currently under construction directly adjacent from the Harborside Academic Center on Harborside Boulevard.

The property is being developed by Spectrum Properties, a Charlotte based company that has constructed apartment complexes in Charlotte. The immaculate neighborhood-like setting will be ready in plenty of time for the 2006 school year, according to John Gray, President of Spectrum Properties.

"I don't want anybody to worry that it's not going to be open because it is. We plan on having a grand opening event, handing the first resident his or her own key," Gray said.

Five hundred and seventy-six students will be allowed to move into the 12 apartment buildings at that time. The University expects a 95 percent occupancy rate.

Every apartment will consist of a four-bedroom, two-bath layout, including a fully-applianced kitchen, a washer and dryer in each apartment.

"There will be fantastic views of Naramonet Bay," stated Gray.

"It's fantastic," exclaimed Gray.

Harborside Village will be fully furnished with furniture different than residence halls and parking will not be a problem to residents, although a small fee will be charged to students for their personal space. Only pedestrians will have access to the village, with the exception of residents.

"I'm developing another property in Charlotte for J & W called City View Towers. This has black steel furniture trimmed with cherry wood. It's also very durable. Obviously in an environment like this you've got to have furniture that's pretty dependable," Gray said.

A transportation center will also be built to serve students from the rough New England weather.

"It's very central to campus. I think it will really add to the whole campus atmosphere. It will finish off what was an ugly vacant lot. I think with the other improvements that the university has planned, this will start to mark the maturation of the Harborside campus," said Gray.

(The other improvements Gray refers to include two additional classroom buildings, and numerous athletic complexes pictured above.)

A major concern for J & W before the project moved forward was the condition of the soil on the area.

The Harborside campus was filled in during World War II for a shipyard for transports.

"It was done hastily because there was a huge effort to win the war," said Gray.

The soil is very soft and if anything were to be built on it, you have to make sure that it doesn't sink and settle into the mud over the years," according to Gray. A stable foundation was built for the property.

Another issue (with the majority of the campus) is soil contamination. Ninety-eight percent of Rhode Island has arsenic contamination difficulties. Arsenic is a naturally occurring substance in the soil in the state.

"We've got some here, but not any more than other areas. The state wants you to do something about it when you build a new building," he said.

The state requires two feet of fill in order to build. All of the issues with soil at Harborside Village have been corrected as of today according to officials.

The remaining areas of the master plan will meet requirements with the state at some point in the future.

The cost to students will be approximately $500 dollars per month, plus a utility fee per student, for a 12 month lease.

Students will be able to live at the village year round.

"This is still in my research far less than what it would cost to live in the neighborhood, and less than what the University charges. I feel confident in telling you that I don't think students will be able to find this quality product out there especially next to campus for that price," said Gray.

There will be three levels of security at the each building. The main entrance is locked, the apartment is locked, and the bedroom is locked.

Edward Rowe Architects, a Providence-based company (who has worked on other projects with J & W) particularly Snowden Hall, has designed the structure.

"Thirty years from now it will look as good as it looks today because it's not wood, it's brick. When we have an environment close to the bay, we have to build a product that will really stand up to that," said Gray.

There was an initial public concern of traffic and wild parties according to officials. The University conducted a study to get the master plan approved with the city. The study indicated that there would be less traffic and that it would be an advantage for neighbors.
"Neighbors were a bit nervous, they were worried about how it's going to impact them, all legitimate questions," said Gray.

Officials from the University said that once the neighbors were informed about the details of the project, and their concerns were addressed, they were "all for" the project.

The University also feels it will be easier to control any type of student conduct incidents because the area will be enclosed with a village type setting.

"This is something people will be able to use over the summer, it's good for the community," said Gray.

Dean of Students Ronald Martel said that he was very excited about the opportunity to students and that the apartments offer another style option.

"It offers a tremendous boost to the campus community in terms of a different lifestyle. It expands some of our opportunities to create a progressive housing system," he said. Wrestling

The Johnson & Wales University wrestling squad has put the finishing touches on the most successful season in school history. Competing this past weekend at the NCAA Division III Championship, the Wildcats notched a 19th-place finish, the best finish in school history.

Leading the way for JWU was senior Tim Ruberg who became just the second JWU wrestler in school history to earn All-American honors, finishing in third-place at the NCAA Championship. He joined current JWU assistant coach James Gilbert as Wildcats who have been named All-Americans. Also competing for Johnson & Wales at the NCAA Division III Championship was junior Anthony Montes and freshmen Brandon McDonough and Steve Martell.

Junior Chris Wells, an All-New England performer on the mat, was also successful in the classroom, earning National Wrestling Coaches Association Academic All-American accolades.

Head coach Lonnie Morris and the Wildcats had a storybook season in 2005, capturing the school’s second Pilgrim League Championship while finishing with an outstanding 19-4 dual-meet record and a top-10 national ranking.

Men’s Basketball

First-year head coach Jamie Benton and the Wildcats posted a 15-12 record and advanced to the semifinals of the Great Northeast Athletic Conference before falling to Norwich.

Senior Brian Bannister was named a second-team All-Great Northeast Athletic Conference performer, leading the team with 16.3 points while adding 4.8 rebounds and 3.0 assists per game. Junior Conor Moran was also named a third-team All-GNAC performer after chipping in with 10.0 points and a team-best 5.7 rebounds per game for the Wildcats.

Women’s Basketball

In her last season as head coach for the Wildcats, Stephanie Brown guided the squad to a 1-23 record. Junior Shatoya Green (Poughkeepsie, N.Y.) led the way for the Wildcats this season, averaging 9.9 points, 3.7 rebounds and 2.2 assists while junior Dawn Knowles (Dexter, N.Y.) added 7.5 points and a team best 6.8 rebounds per game.

Ice Hockey

Second year head coach Erik Noack guided the Wildcats to a berth in the ECAC Northeast playoffs after finishing the regular-season with an 8-7-0 record in league play, good for sixth-place. The Wildcats dropped a hard-fought 6-2 decision against Wentworth in the quarterfinals, finishing the season with a 9-15-2 record. Freshman Matt McGIlvray, a solid candidate for ECAC Northeast Rookie of the Year accolades, led the team in scoring with 12 goals and 19 assists for 31 points while senior Will Meyer tallied 12 goals and nine assists for 21 on the season. Freshman Charlie Bacon posted a 4.35 goals against average with an .872 save percentage in 21 games this year.

Future Leaders of the World

BY JORGE BOLIVAR
Staff Writer

The band of the future is taking over the world with new leaders. The Future leaders of the World are the new upcoming band that is gathering some attention with their somewhat elusive Nirvana sound. Although not comparing this band to Nirvana because they have a true hard rock and original sound with street smart delivery. The band consists of the lead singer and song writer Phil Taylor, Drummer- Carl Messina, Bassist- Bill Hershey and finally the guitarist- Jake Stutevoss. The group uses social activism and anger at governmental corruption as inspiration. Taylor says “Ultimately I want to create awareness about issues that are important to me like the environment, the war in Iraq, and governmental corruption.” The song “Your Gov’t loves you” mentions of corporate waste and the Middle East and “Unité” which picks peace over war from the invasion in Iraq. The album called Level 4 is all about Taylor’s struggles and his point of view of the world. He went to San Francisco to live with a relative, attend college and start a band. However, that did not happen due to his relative kicking him out and leaving him homeless. Instead he started living on rooftops, couches and parks still going to school full-time. Through his struggles he learned a lot from people he met like poets, artists, and rappers and that made him a better songwriter. Check them out on the web at www.futureleadersoftheworld.com.

Atreyu’s headlining tour hits New England

BY MATHEW MEDEIROS
A&E Editor

The Worcester Palladium exploded with the metal styling of Atreyu on Saturday, March 6. With their second album, The Curse, being heard from the underground, Atreyu is headlining their first ever world tour entitled, Thick as Thieves.

Atreyu’s Orange County, California hometowns and Victory record mates, Scars of Tomorrow warmed up the crowd up with some mostly friendly hardcore. Norma Jean preceded to enrage the fans more with their chaotic metal and bright lights. Massachusetts own, made it so not one person was standing still. The sold out crowd moshed to every note as well as singing along to every word.

With more and more bands wearing tight girls jeans and black eyeliner, the look of 80’s hair metal seems to be returning. However, the sound is definitely more metal than ever before. Dueling guitarists, Dan Jacobs and Travis Miguel, battle it out on stage with their heavy breakdowns and harmonizing leads. Drummer and singer, Brandon Saller pounds away on his double bass while singing the melodic choruses.

Lead vocalist, Alex Varkatzas kept the crowd on their toes. After he screams the verses, he stuck the microphone into the crowd so they could sing along with the choruses about vampires. Such as, “Will you still look at me the same when you taste my victim’s blood?” from their new single, “The Crimson.”

“Live, love, burn, die,” was heard from the entire venue as Atreyu ended their hour long set with “Lip Gloss and Black,” which is the last track of their first album, Suicide Notes and Butterfly Kisses. The fans screamed for more and Atreyu came out, only to rock an encore of a brutal rendition of Bon Jovi’s “You Give Love a Bad Name.”

“Atreyu put on one of the best shows I’ve ever seen. They sound exactly like they do on cd,” said John Wiley a fan at the show.

Atreyu’s new video for “The Crimson” can be seen on Headbangers Ball which airs on MTV2 on Saturday nights at 10pm. After selling 90,000 units and still going, Atreyu is ready for world domination.

The students at Johnson & Wales left Weybosset Café with a new look on life and black history. The students were encouraged at the end of the night to keep up with their interest in poetry.

given to him by the audience creating a cipher that was out of this world.

His poetry on the night ranged from the poem "Danger" which was inspired by the FBI storming his mother's house to "The Best Thing in Life," a retrospect on life stemming from a conversation with a homeless man. Amir's delivery is reminiscent of KRS-ONE who brought a power to all of his verses, even poems about love. He finished the night with a story and poem about a young lady whom he had never met declaring that she loved him, simply from hearing his poetry.

The night was a fine display of these two men's art. The students at Johnson & Wales left Weybosset Café with a new look on life and black history. The students were encouraged at the end of the night to keep up with their interest in poetry. I don't want to believe that my generation of baseball is a fraud. I don't want to think that the greatest season in recent years, the 1998 season was merely steroid driven.

Giambi won the MVP in 2000. In looked grand jury testimony Giambi admitted to using steroids, but giving them up mid-way through the season. In 2004 Giambi hit a career low 207 while dealing with health problems. We have a clear cut case here of the unfair advantage Giambi has had over his career, and the drop it has since taken. These Giambi and Canseco should be banned for life from baseball.

With this juiced era of baseball filled with huge power numbers and broken records forever scoured in darkness, we must look to the past and honor the greats who have played the game, and look at what they were able to accomplish.

For example, Jason Giambi has hit 269 home runs in his first ten professional seasons with a career batting average of 291, while ranging as high as 341 in 1996 and 333 in 2000. In addition, the question is do they lead to excess returns? Later notes that this premise that CSR leads to increased profitability is fundamentally flawed and there is no evidence in support of this view.

Conversely, the study includes indications that CSR activities actually lead to a decrease in firm profitability. A comparison of the 25 companies' financial standing and stock price appreciation reported that only a minority of the 25 CSR-leading companies have been able to outperform their peers. The study notes, "Being a CSR-leading company was negatively or not correlated with comparable annual net income growth, returns on equity and stock price appreciation."

Hopefully, we will take a lesson on how to make a differential in the social good the school is responsible for is to turn our attention to the social good and to impact society the right way. Only then can "giving back" be truly measured.

José Canseco, steroids, and the fraudulent era of baseball

Guest-Writer

I don't want to believe he is a clown, a criminal, and someone it is hard to respect. I don't want to believe, and his motives are foggy. Unfortunately, I need to accept that much of what he is saying is the truth. I am not going to judge the names he has given out, but I wouldn't put it past them.

I don't want to believe that my generation of baseball is a fraud. I don't want to think that the greatest season in recent years, the 1998 season was merely steroid driven. I don't want to believe that the greatest pitcher of my time, and that the Red Sox ever had, Roger Clemens was allegedly a fraud. I don't want to think that Barry Bonds, who is quickly reaching Hank Aaron on the all-time home run list, is a fraud.

I don't want to believe, and much of that may not be the fault of any of us.

CLASSIFIEDS

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A pesky health problem should clear up soon. Meanwhile, travel -- both for personal as well as for business reasons -- is strong in the Aries aspect this week, and well into the next.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Look for Bovines to be on the move this week, whether it's traveling for fun or for business. Other "moves" include workplace adjustments and, for some, relationship changes.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Geminians who have just gone through a hectic period involving job and/or family matters might want to take some well-earned time out to relax and restore those drained energy levels.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A romantic situation seems to have stalled, just when the Moon Child was expecting it to go forward. Could be a bad case of miscommunication going on. Talk it over openly and honestly.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Showing a genuine interest in something that's important to a friend, family member or colleague could open a communication line that had been pretty much shut down for a while.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Making a potentially life-changing decision takes as much knowledge as you can gather, plus determination and patience. Take your time working it out. Don't let anyone rush you.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You should be back on schedule and heading in the right direction after clearing up a misunderstanding. But there could still be some setbacks. If so, correct them immediately.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A business matter keeps you pretty busy, but try to squeeze in time to be with family as well as close friends. You need the good vibrations you get from people who care for you.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Investing in an attractive prospect (business or personal) with little or no information can be risky. Avoid future problems by getting all the facts before you act.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Someone close to you might have an unexpected reaction to a decision you feel you're prepared to make. Listen to his or her point of view. It could prove surprisingly helpful.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Don't give up yet. That once warm personal relationship that seems to be cooling off fast could recover with some tender, loving care, and who better than you to provide it?

PIECES (February 19 to March 20) Career matters are strong this week. You might want to enter a training program to enhance your skills. Also, consider getting professional help in preparing a brilliant resume.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a way of respecting the feelings of others, which is one reason people feel comfortable having you in their lives.
