Library Rolls Out Instant Message Reference (Need Help? Meebo Us!)

The Johnson & Wales University Library has extended its web presence by rolling out virtual reference via Instant Message. During the day & evening, 7 days a week, you can get help on any topic by just sending an Instant Message via the library's website at library.jwu.edu/prov without ever having to leave your home!

The library rolled out this pilot program in October and has already received over 175 requests for assistance via IM.

University Dean of Libraries, Rosie Hopper, states, "In response to the University's mission to create a distance learning program, an initiative that began this Winter Trimester, the library felt that virtual help via instant message would help to fulfill the needs of distance learners."

Meet the New Digital Services Librarian

Librarian Talia Resendes has always had a passion for technology. Long ago, as an undergraduate student at Loyola College in Baltimore, Maryland Talia had no difficulty when it came to choosing her major: Information Systems Science. "I have always been interested in technology and its ability to transform an individual, society and even the world." With her bachelor's degree in hand, Talia moved to New Zealand for two years in pursuit of a Masters in Information Systems. Her thesis, which is scheduled for completion later this year, focuses on the virtual world of Second Life.

Talia's zeal extends to Web 2.0 technologies, specifically web-based applications that allow users to be active users and contributors of World Wide Web content.

But why does JWU need a Digital Services Librarian? Dean of Libraries Rosie Hopper is the first to point out that the worlds of information, industry and scholarship are changing rapidly. "Our students must leave JWU fully adept at finding, using and communicating the best information and ideas in a fully online environment. By optimizing JWU Library digital services we can be key to helping JWU students fulfill that goal. Prior to the establishment of the DSL position, we simply could not find the staff time to make it happen. As our Digital Services Librarian, Talia will focus on—and teach our staff—how to integrate web-based services such as IM reference into the traditional library environment which is and will continue to be relevant as long as the world of information continues to expand."

Soft Students Rock the Vote!

Prof. Brian Alves, School of Technology, wanted to inspire students in his Desktop Publishing class to take part in the then upcoming Presidential elections. Students had to create an motivational poster with a simple message, GET OUT AND VOTE! “What was great about the posters was that there was no party bias. No posters stated ‘Vote for Change’ or ‘McCain 2008’ it was just about getting the message out, the message to go to the polls and vote” stated Librarian Talia Resendes. And the inspirational message did get out. The posters were displayed for several weeks prior to the November election in the Downcity Library located on the 2nd floor of the Yena Center. Senior Hospitality major Walkiria Rosendo stated, “Voting was nothing to me. But after I voted, I realized that something inside me had changed. And that change wasn’t a result of the news or the television, it was those posters that I saw everyday created by my JWU classmates.”

The library looks forward to working with Prof. Brian Alves again, as well as with other faculty, to showcase student work.

Rolling out LibGuides— It’s a Hit!

With over 40,000 hits since its debut, Johnson & Wales University Library’s new online application, LibGuides, has been a huge hit. Subject, class & assignment specific online research guides allow students to find information that will help them to be successful in their courses.
Undergraduate student Weston

Collings states, “LibGuides was so helpful to me in my ENG1020: English Composition class. I was able to find research that would help me directly with my research paper.”
 Currently, the Library has 33 class and subject guides ‘live’ with plans in the pipeline for many more.
