

The Beaman Tavern originally sat
beneath the Wachusett Reservoir, can you believe that?
So now we've restored a bit of its lore,
for you to enjoy and a little bit more.
Here is its tale with a smidgin' of history,
in poetry form with a sprinklin' of jestery.

That look of love was in his eyes
in 1758 when Ezra marries Persis Keyes.
Six children she had . . . oh what a mother!
those parents adored each sister and brother.
Second son named Jabez soon died of the small pox.
Laid to rest in the Beaman Cemetery in a simple pine box.

The Beaman Trough constructed of stone
now stands near the library, proud but alone.
In 1808 the first day of its use
the trough held rum and plenty of juice.
It was packed off and moved when the tavern was torn down
For all to enjoy in this West Boylston town.

Residents of town, the West Boylston folk sadly miss the historical Beaman Oak.
Ezra put spikes in the center of the tree
"To ward off the woodmen," he chuckled with glee.
With several chops of a sturdy ax, historians say
the Beaman Oak fell by the hands of Charles Bray.

Thomas Harlow was the very next man in line
to buy the tavern from Ezra, and act so fine.
He converted the cider mill into a home
for Clarendon Mills workers with no place to roam.
In 1900 his holdings were sold to the state
at the site of Wachusett Reservoir to this very date.

The original tavern, this certainly ain't.
We've tried to construct a place that is quaint
to meet with friends and enjoy a meal,
relax, unwind and get back on keel.
The Beaman Tavern is the place that is right
for luncheon at day and dinners at night.

Welcome, Friends!
