Ranger

Ranger was the last of the magnificent J-boats to defend the America's Cup. With the onset of World War II, it seemed that America's Cup racing had breathed its last. But, in 1958, the Cup rules were changed, and from then to the present day, the high-tech 12 meter yachts have vied for "The Auld Mug" every four or five years on a regular basis. With the loss of the Cup to Australia in 1983, the race is on again to build faster and more efficient America's Cup challengers.
